JOHN EHRLICHMAN
. . . President Declines

Subpoena Declined by Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Arguing that compliance "would open the door for unfettered and wholesale imposition" upon the Presidency, President Nixon Tuesday formally declined a subpoena to testify at the trial of John D. Ehrlichman, his former No. 2 aide.

In a letter to Chief Judge Harold H. Greene of the District of Columbia Superior Court, Nixon's chief Watergate counsel, James D. St. Clair, said the President must be concerned daily with major domestic and international interests.

"To accede to the compulsory process of a state court would not only unduly interfere with the grave responsibility of the President to make the decisions which affect the continued security of the nation, but would open the door for unfettered and wholesale imposition upon the office of the President by the courts of each of the 50 states," St. Clair said.

Former White House aides David R. Young and G. Gordon Liddy will go on trial with Ehrlichman on charges arising from the 1971 burglary at the office of the psychiatrist of Daniel Ellsberg, who leaked the Pentagon Papers to the press.

It is Ehrlichman's lawyers who are seeking to subpoena Nixon. The subpoena was routinely sent by Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer in Los Angeles Feb. 4 to the Superior Court in the nation's capital for validation. Greene asked both sides for briefs and set March 15 for a hearing.

St. Clair wrote that Nixon "must and does respectfully decline to appear at the hearing and as witness in the California state court."

The subpoena, St. Clair said, raises "a serious constitutional question regarding the authority of a state judiciary to infringe upon the effective operation of the office of the President of the United States.

In related developments, The Associated Press learned Tuesday that the special Watergate prosecutor's office has decided that any action on alleged presidential involvement in the Watergate scandal should be up to the House impeachment inquiry rather than a grand jury.

The House Judiciary committee disclosed that John Doar, chief counsel for the impeachment inquiry, has sent a letter to St. Clair requesting White House tapes and documents.

Doar resisted efforts by some committee members to impose a deadline for St. Clair's response. He told members last week that it should take only "a day or two" for St. Clair to assemble the information.

Doar didn't make public what information he sought, but he had said earlier he would use for the initial request a list of material supplied by the White House to Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

Several committee members, Republicans and Democrats alike, said they became skeptical about Nixon's cooperation when, in his Monday night news conference, the President said he would cooperate as long as he could protect the office of the presidency and the ability of future presidents to function.

Area Gas Lines Shrink as Plan Starts

By MATT SPIRENG
KINGSTON

The area's seemingly meager supply of gasoline may have been no greater Tuesday than it was Monday, but at least the waiting lines at the pumps were shorter.

As the first day of the state's mandatory alternate-day rationing plan drew to a close, spokesmen for most area gas stations surveyed by the Freeman said their lines were shrinking.

"Yesterday (Monday) at this time they were lined up out into the street," said Charlie Chrastil of Nishan's Sunoco on Ulster Avenue Mall.

It was easy for Chrastil to find the time to say something, because there were no cars—that's right, none—at the gas pumps, even though they were open at about noon Tuesday.

"I haven't had a line all day," Chrastil said. "I'm pleased with the mandatory plan."

There was a line at the Kingston Exxon Car Wash pumps on Tuesday. But according to manager Tony Scuderi, the mandatory plan has shortened lines from what they were before.

Related area gas crisis stories on page 17.

"So far it's slowed down the flow of traffic to the pumps," said Vince Hainer, owner of Colonial Sunoco on Broadway.

But other owners said that it may be too early to tell if the plan is really working.

"It hasn't cut our lines yet," said Mike Sirni, owner of Holiday Inn Gulf on Washington Avenue.

Sirni also had time to talk because there was no one at his pumps—but only because they were closed.

Sirni, like many area gas station operators, kept the pumps open for only a few hours in the morning in an attempt to make his allocation stretch through the entire month.

Odd-number license plate holders appeared, in general, to be abiding by the mandatory plan Tuesday, an even day, according to spokesmen at the surveyed stations.

And all of the surveyed stations were abiding by the law in turning away cars with odd-number plates unless they were emergency, commerical or agricultural vehicles or taxis.

"I had a salesman with an odd-number plate begging me for gas this morning," said Art Ferraro, proprietor of Perry's Arco on Broadway. "I had to refuse him."

Ferraro expressed sympathy for people whose very livelihood may depend on getting gas such as salesmen, and said he'd prefer a different form of rationing.

But some odd-number plate holders were apparently taking advantage of the rule that gas can be pumped into gas cans no matter what the date is.

"I had a noticeable increase right off the bat in gas can sales," said Hainer. Other station owners said they had "one or two" come in with gas cans, and some were turning away those with the cans.

Some station owners, such as Richard Coffin who runs a Shell station near the Thruway interchange, said they are abiding by the requirement that gas not be sold to motorists with more than half a tank. But others are ignoring that requirement.

"I'm not paying any attention to whether they have half a tank," said Bob Baker, owner of Plaza Mobil.

"I'm not checking the gas gauges," said Sirni. "Checking the plates is bother enough."

Under the rationing order, operators are required to ask motorists if they have less than half a tank, but they are not required to check gauges themselves. And, in any event, only motorists are liable for penalties under the half-tank rule.

The indications were Tuesday that many area motorists are willing to take the chance of being fined for filling up a car that already had more than a half a tank.

Meanwhile, across the state, motorists and service station operators in New York say the new mandatory system for regulating gasoline sales is making it a lot easier to deal with the shortage.

"We can even check the oil," said Salvatore Frato, co-owner of an eight-pump station on Staten Island. "It's the first time it's been normal since before Christmas."

The state introduced an Oregon-style odd-even plan based on license plate numbers Tuesday, becoming the 14th in the nation to do so. The Automobile Club of New York said a survey of 192 stations Tuesday showed that lines of waiting cars were only about one to two blocks long, "the shortest they've been in a very, very long time."

The Civil Aeronautics Board Tuesday decided to put off a scheduled decision on a 6 per cent fare hike proposed by Eastern and Frontier airlines to make up for the higher cost of jet fuel. The board said in a statement that needed information has become available only within the last week.

Trans World Airlines announced it will add 37 daily flights March 1 because its fuel allocation has been increased from 85 to 95 per cent of the 1972 level. Passenger flights to be restored include routes from Washington to Denver and Phoenix, New York and Tulsa, Pittsburgh and San Francisco, Detroit and Kansas City and Kansas City and Louisville.

Energy Bill On Tap Again

Combined Wire Services

WASHINGTON — House backers of emergency energy legislation are making a final attempt today to send the bill to President Nixon, despite his promise to veto it.

The measure, which includes authority for Nixon to order gasoline rationing, was in and out of a House-Senate conference committee until it passed the Senate Feb. 19th on a 67-32 vote, enough for a two-thirds vote to override a veto.

But the House Rules Committee last week set up procedures under which several key portions of the bill would have to be voted on separately by the House. Any changes would require the legislative procedure to begin again, probably killing chances for approval. Even if passed in the House, it is doubtful sponsors could muster a two-thirds vote to override a veto.

At his Monday night news conference, Nixon said he would veto the bill. He says its provision for rolling back gasoline prices would discourage production and make supplies even more scarce. He objects to the bill's formula for energy-related unemployment compensation and a provision for congressional veto of his actions.

In other energy-related developments on Capitol Hill Tuesday:

—Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said the President does not have to wait for Congress to pass an emergency bill and should order gasoline rationing under the Korean War Emergency Act of 1950.

Ralph Nader in attack on major oil companies. Story page 28.

—At a Senate committee hearing, Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., asked Federal Energy Administrator William E. Simon why rationing would not be better than long lines at gasoline stations. Simon said the lines will be reduced by perfecting the allocation of petroleum products, without the need of rationing.

Jackson said, "I'll say this, Mr. Simon. We will have to dig a big bomb shelter for you by April if the lines are longer."

—House Speaker Carl Albert said: "There is still a genuine crisis." House Democratic Leader Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said, "It is all very well for President Nixon to say the energy crisis is over—he doesn't have to wait in gas lines." Nixon had said Monday the energy "crisis" had been reduced to a "problem."

In addition to rationing authority, the bill would give Nixon a long list of emergency powers.

He could order power plants to switch fuels, could limit hours of business, could waive some clean-air rules to accommodate fuel switches and could limit highway speeds.

Congressional maneuvering is expected to settle the legislative fate of the bill.

Unless the parliamentary rule is amended, an oil-state representative almost certainly will object to the price rollback provision on the ground that it was inserted in the bill by a Senate-House conference and never has been voted upon by the full House.

Most observers agree that Speaker Carl Albert would be forced to sustain such an objection and the bill would be effectively killed.

Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., told federal energy chief Simon that his credibility and that of the President are being severely questioned as a result of the claim the crisis is over.

Feraca Going to Court In School Board Ruling

By MATT SPIRENG
KINGSTON

Ordered by the State Education Department to resign either his position with the Kingston Police Department or his seat on the Board of Education of the Kingston Consolidated School District, Joseph Feraca has decided to do neither. He is, instead, going to battle the decision in State Supreme Court.

"Because of the support I have received from individuals and associations, I have decided to appeal the decision," Feraca told the Freeman today.

The city detective has recently received backing from the Kingston Patrolmen's Association and a local unit of the Civil Service Employes Association, which maintain that he has a right to hold both posts.

Feraca, who was given until March 5 to resign as a police officer or as a member of the board of education, said his appeal will be lodged with the State Supreme Court "very soon, before the deadline expires."

In announcing his decision to enter into a court battle, Feraca said, "I am proud of being a police officer as well as a member of the board of education, and I will continue to do the best I can for the people of this community and for the education of their children."

The acting commissioner of education, Gordon M. Ambach, has ruled that Feraca, who was elected to the board of education in 1970 and who has been a member of the Kingston Police Department since 1963, is holding two "city offices" in violation of a section of the State Education Law.

Feraca places third on test for New Paltz Village police chief post. Story on Page 4.

Feraca questioned the constitutionality of the departmental ruling, and said his main concern is with giving service to the community. "I want to have my rights as a citizen to serve the community," he said.

Feraca also questioned whether his unpaid position with the Kingston Consolidated School District, which serves areas outside the City of Kingston as well as in it, and his post with the Kingston Police Department can be considered "city offices."

The State Education Department ruling came as result of an appeal lodged by Everette Hodge, executive director of the local NAACP. In filing the appeal, Hodge had alleged that there was a "conflict of interest" stemming from a controversial Nov. 15, 1972 incident at Kingston High School when several black students were arrested after a demonstration and an altercation with police officers.

Feraca maintains that there was no conflict of interest, and said that he has always attempted to do what is best for all members of the community.

In a recent interview with the Freeman, Officer Gerald Tierney, head of the 70-member Kingston Patrolmen's Association, termed the Education Department ruling "unfair" and indicated he hoped Feraca would fight it.

Tierney said the KPA has received assurances from the Police Conference of New York, Inc., which represents police officers across the state, that their lawyers would give assistance to Feraca's attorneys should he fight the ruling.

Tierney added that the ruling "treats law enforcement officers like second class citizens."

Anthony Fattarino, president of the local CSEA unit representing the Kingston Board of Public Works, which is also backing Feraca, said Monday that his group feels "that a police officer has the right like any other citizen or taxpayer to participate in community affairs."

"I am grateful to the many people who have contacted me to offer and to give their support," Feraca said today.

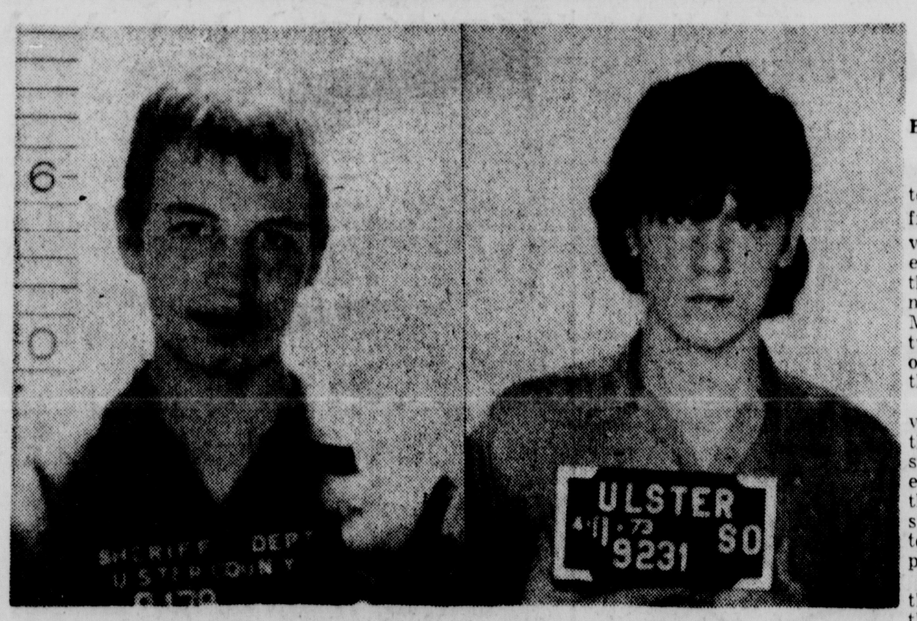

He will be represented in his court battle by the firm of Saccoman, Kelly and Napoletano of Kingston.

'No Bill' in UCCC Case

An Ulster County Grand Jury has handed up a "no bill" to Supreme Court Justice John L. Larkin, thus ending its three-month investigation of the UCCC basketball irregularity involving an alleged forged transcript which resulted in the forfeit of all games during the 1972-73 basketball season.

District Attorney Francis J. Vogt said there was "absolutely no evidence of involvement in the alleged forgery on the part of any member of the UCCC staff, past or present." The forfeit of the UCCC's winning season was due to the ineligibility of player Robert Miller, whose New York City high school marks were forged.

The grand jury also handed up a sealed presentment (or list of recommendations regarding the case) that Vogt said would not be made public for 31 days.

ESCAPEES RUSSO (L) AND STRUBER.

An Escape or 'Teenage Prank?'

By LYNN MULVANEY
KINGSTON

While the search continued today for two ecaped inmates from the Ulster County Jail, various area police officials expressed concern over the fact that they were not officially notified by Sheriff William B. Martin until 23 hours after the two men made their getaway on foot into the woods behind the jail Monday afternoon.

City, state police and Investigator Thomas Mayone of the District Attorney's Office said they consider a felony escape a serious matter and that not being notified by the sheriff posed a serious threat to the safety of not only the police but to all citizens.

The two escapees, trusties at the jail on Golden Hill, ran from the deputy guarding them as they were emptying garbage outdoors after Monday lunch. They were identified as Leroy Struber, 17 of Spring Lake Trailer Park and Scott Russo, 18, of Port Ewen.

Sheriff Martin, on the other hand, considers the escape "a teenage prank."

"These things happen from time to time," Martin said. "You know you can't hate these kids — they think it's cute to do this kind of thing . . . Don't call it an escape, call it an elopement."

Russo was serving six months on a criminal mischief charge for destroying a toilet in the jail while incarcerated on a previous charge. He was originally arrested on Dec. 30 on a warrant issued by Town of Esopus Justice Robert Jordon. At that time he was charged with issuing a bad check.

Struber was in jail awaiting Grand Jury action, which came today, with his indictment for burglary in connection with several burglaries of the Hitching Post Restaurant in Ruby.

Martin said that the two inmates phoned their parents after their escape and that they were frightened away from their parents' homes when they supposedly noticed the sheriff's department stakeout.

Investigator Mayone pointed out that according to law the sheriff was obligated to put word of the escape on the police teletype five hours after it occurred. State Police at Hurley and City Police Chief Glassman said the teletype finally was received by them 23 hours later, shortly after noon on Tuesday.

"You have two guys running loose in the city," Mayone said, "the sheriff should have let the city and state police know."

Glassman said he had heard rumors of an escape but said he had to call the Sheriff's Department to determine if it was true. He said he was notified at 1 p.m. Tuesday and immediately sent word out to all men on his force with pictures of the two escapees who are both described as about five-foot nine and 150 pounds in weight.

Glassman said "this situation has to be straightened out. I wouldn't want one of my men on the street unaware that they might be stopping an escaped prisoner. They need to know in order to use extra caution."

State Police indicated they weren't officially notified either . . . no telephone, no radio communication and no teletype until Tuesday afternoon.

Sheriff Martin said he looked at things differently. Reviewing the escape, he recalled that when the two ran away, the guard chased them down the hill shouting at them and although he could have shot them, he thought it better to capture them alive.

Martin claimed that both the city police and the state police were notified on Monday.

The sheriff said that the only time the prisoners go out is to empty garbage and that he doesn't feel both had planned to run away. But he thinks, when Struber saw Russo run, he decided to join him.

"Struber will call me up when he gets to a phone," Martin said confidently.

"I don't think they ran away for liberty. I think they said, 'Let's do it for the hell of it.'"

Martin conjectured, adding that, "They probably don't even know what they did."

Paltz Board Sets Referendum Date

By WADE BURKHART
NEW PALTZ

At an "informal discussion" meeting Tuesday night, the New Paltz Board of Education outlined what the $675,000 being sought in a bond issue will buy in the way of renovation of the New Paltz Middle School.

Following the discussion meeting, the school board voted to hold the referendum on the bond issue Tuesday, April 2, with the polls open between 2 and 9 p.m. in the Middle School auditorium.

The building that is receiving the renovation — the resolution setting the bond vote called it a "reconstruction"—is a rather old one. Part of the building was constructed in 1930 and the building's main addition went up in 1954.

Board Vice President Jerry Bart, who is the head of the board's facilities committee, said the result was "sort of a hodge-podge effect." The renovation planned for the building will not do anything to relieve the hodge-podge, but it will provide a great deal of exterior fixing, important safety features now lacking, a new library-media center, and considerable cosmetic improvement.

As told by Bart, the exterior stonework will be repaired, wooden door and window frames now suffering from dry rot will be replaced with aluminum, damaged pavement will be replaced, and a new parking area with diagonal parking created.

Inside, ceilings in the corridors will be lowered, new lights and lockers will be installed, and the walls will receive a finish that will eliminate repainting.

A modern intercom system will be installed, electrical rewiring will be done, and the auditorium will be renovated.

For safety's sake, the stairwells will be enclosed and better lighted, and doors that swing shut, though not lock, when activated by a smoke alarm will be installed in all the stairwells.

The present library will be exapnded to include the adjacent science classroom, and the new facility will become a library-media center.

Bard said the plan the board was presenting was only one of many it had considered. The board had also considered a second bond issue for the April 2 vote for an addition at the high school which would have provided space for four additional classrooms. Board President Joan Bivona said after the meeting that the board had decided against the high school plan for a variety of reasons, including possibly endangering the vote on the Middle School, and would try using movable partitions in the high school's larger classrooms to get the space needed.

The architects for the Middle School plan are Flemming and Silverman, of Newburgh, and they were represented at Tuesday night's meeting by George Silverman.

About 40 people attended the meeting and the only criticism heard was not that the renovation was too extensive or too expensive, but that the board might not have gone far enough.

Dr. George O. Smith, who had acted as superintendent of schools at New Paltz while the search for the present superintendent, Dr. James Hicken, was going on, said, "You're only giving a hormone injection to a building whose life span has almost been exceeded." He suggested "testing the smartness of the people of New Paltz" by trying for a new building. Bart said that had been considered, but the board felt its proposal best balanced educational needs with what the district could pay.

Other suggestions for more changes in the building were met with the response that the board felt it was asking for as much as it could justify, all factors considered.

FUNDS FOR AGING — A check for $11,460 was presented the Ulster County Senior Citizens Alliance by the Ulster County Legislature recently to provide funds for recreation and education for the elderly. Participating in the check presentation at the Ulster County Office Building were: (L) Legislator George Sisti Jr. (R-Dist. 8), chairman of the Program for the Aging Committee; County Treasurer Fred H. DuBois; Mrs. Antoinette Tennent, president of the Senior Citizens Alliance and Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago (R-Dist. 8).

Public Hearings in Esopus

By CARL GRAHAM
PORT EWEN

The Esopus Zoning Board of Appeals conducted two public hearings on variances Tuesday night, one concerning a trailer and the other a duplex house.

Douglas Schook asked the board for permission to store a trailer on his five-acre plot on Schook Road. He said he had purchased the trailer in 1969, before the town's zoning ordinance was enacted, but that it had been removed for more than a year by his daughter and son-in-alw for use as a residence in Rnode Island and Florida.

Board member Joseph Montella pointed out that the trailer had been off the property for more than a year, discontinuing its use, and that a town moratorium on trailers was in effect when it was brought back, putting it in violation o state law.

Schook was warned that if he was granted permission to store the trailer, any attempt to occupy it would void the permit. Schook said he wanted to hook up electricity and gas to keep the trailer from deteriorating while it is stored but would not hook up sewage or water supply lines, which would make it a residence.

Board members heard one letter from a neighbor opposing Schook's request, and Schook submitted eight letters from neighbors who said they favored granting it.

A new state law, effective Jan. 15, requires all newly installed trailers to bear a serially numbered 1974 state inspection certificate, and board members said Schook's trailer lost any right to prior occupancy when it was removed from the premises for more than a year.

The second applicant was Arnold Parodi, who asked permission to construct a duplex home on Highland Avenue in St. Remy in a district zoned for one-family residences.

Paridi told the board his mother can no longer afford to live in her own home, that she is living on a small income, and that construction of the duplex would enable her to be self-sufficient.

Parodi said he would construct the house for his mother on a one-acre lot about 200 yards from his own home but that ownership would be in her name.

Montella suggested that if the house was built on a two-acre lot it would not violate town population density requirements and it would not be challenged by the town planning board.

Two nearby residents supported Parodi's request, which was turned down by the zoning board on a previous occasion.

Mrs. Jeanne Sills told Parodi that the board could not make decisions based on personal need, but was required to operate within limits of the town ordinance.

"I don't want you to think we are being inconsiderate," she said, "but if we granted this variance it would be challenged by the Ulster County Planning Board."

Harold Coffey, zoning board chairman, told both applicants that the board would render a decision on their variance applications within 10 days.

Guilty Plea Entered

POUGHKEEPSIE, New York (UPI)—A Dutchess County man pleaded guilty to criminally negligent homicide Tuesday as his County Court trial was to begin on charges stemming from the death of an Army officer two years ago.

John Butor, 56, of Beacon, admitted being the driver of a car which struck another auto, killing 2nd Lt. John Bennett, 22, of Jefferson City, Mo., and injuring his wife.

At the time of the accident, on Oct. 4, 1972, the Bennetts had been married only four months. He had been stationed at West Point, and the crash occurred on Route 9D at Beacon.

Butor faces a maximum term of four years in prison.

Pair Are Sentenced To Jail

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — A suspended Poughkeepsie policeman and a former member of the force were sentenced Tuesday on charges connected with theft of meat from a truck.

William Howard Jr., 33, a suspended patrolman, and Salvatore Lisi, 25, a former city policeman, were sentenced on charges of petty larceny and official misconduct.

They were sentenced to concurrent six-month terms in the Dutchess County Jail on each charge.

Howard, from Poughkeepsie, and Lisi, formerly of Hyde Park, pleaded guilty to the charges last month.

Winter Weekend At Bennett

MILLBROOK

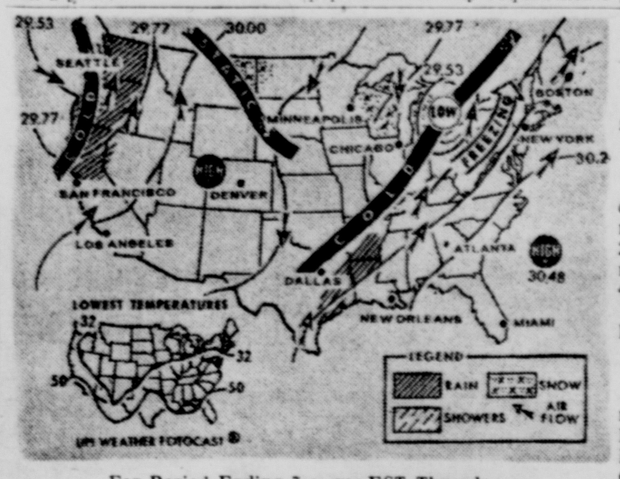

A winter weekend featuring two evenings of dance and concerts is scheduled for March 1-2 at Bennett College.

The two bands will be the RCA recording artists White Chocolate, formerly members of the Buddy Miles Band, which will play on Friday, and the Vanguard recording artists, Clean Living, who will play Saturday night.

Both concert-dances will be in the Bennett Student Center from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The weekend will begin Friday afternoon with a wine and cheese party in the Student Center from 4 to 5 p.m.

Outdoor recreational activities are scheduled for Saturday including downhill and cross-country skiing, weather permitting. At 2:30 p.m. two films, Reefer Madness, a 1936 classic on the evils of marijuana addiction, and Splendor in the Grass starring Warren Beatty and Natalie Wood will be shown in Matthison-Kennedy Auditorium.

Kissinger, Assad Meet Twice

DAMASCUS (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger met with President Hafez Assad twice today in fact-paced talks aimed at getting Syria and Israel to open troop pullback negotiations.

Government sources said Kissinger and Assad conferred from midnight until 3:40 a.m. and then met again at 9:30 a.m. during the active, first stop of the secretarys' fourth Middle East peace mission.

After the first meeting American officials described Kissinger as "cheerful".

The pace of Kissinger's new attempt to get negotiations moving toward a Middle East peace settlement recalled last January's trip, which led to the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli troop disengagement agreement.

Kissinger's talks with Assad took place at the presidential palace in a hilly residential section of the dusty Syrian capital. He spent the night at the three-bedroom, Rawdah govenment guest house across the street from the palace.

Syrian and U.S. authorities maintained strict security during Kissinger's visit to Damascus. Officials gave no indication of the trend of the talks.

The secretary was attempting to get Assad, a 47-year-old air force general who came to power in a 1970 military coup, to agree to Israel's two demands for the start of troop pullback talks along the Golan Heights front.

The Jerusalem government has demanded a list of up to 80 Israeli prisoners captured by Syria in the 1973 Middle East War and International Red Cross visits to the POWs.

A senior American official traveling with Kissinger has said the United States was optimistic of getting the POW list or at least enough assurances to enable the secretary to begin "shuttle diplomacy" between Damascus and Israel.

Kissinger met with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam Tuesday night on arriving in Damascus from London. He drove with Khaddam to the government's guest house for a late supper and the first U.S.-Syrian talks.

Kissinger hoped to visit Damascus' historic Omayyad Mosque today before flying to Jerusalem in the early afternoon to open talks with Israeli leaders.

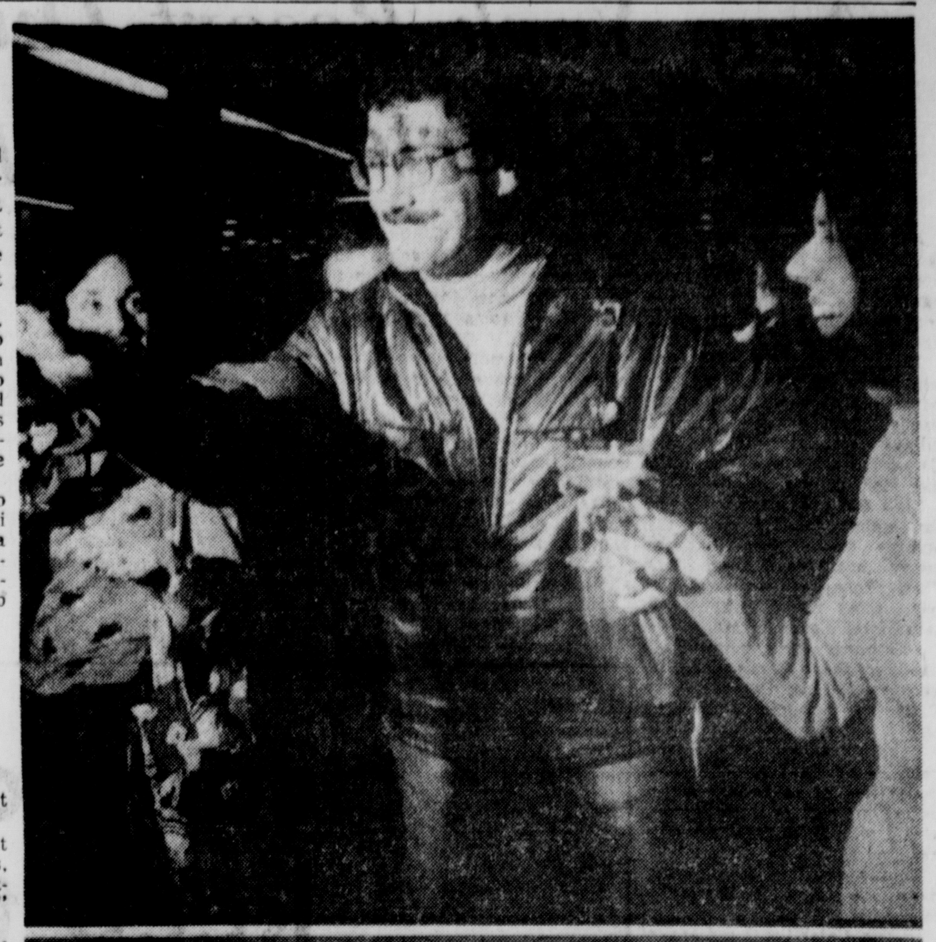

A senior U.S. official said Kissinger would give any list he gets to Prime Minister Golda Meir before announcing it. The United States hoped Israel would then come up with a troop pullback plan for Kissinger to carry back to Syria.

Kissinger planned to visit Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Cairo Thursday to give the Israeli cabinet time to adopt a withdrawal plan. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was scheduled to fly to Cairo the next day, but the two men were not expected to meet.

Syrian official sources said Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev has just sent a message to Assad. It was not known whether the message concerned the current talks.

Under his tentative schedule, Kissinger was to return to Jerusalem for the Israeli plan on Friday and carry it to Damascus. U.S. officials said the likelihood of more trips between Jerusalem and Damascus would depend on the progress of the initial contacts.

Kissinger also planned to visit Jordan and perhaps Saudi Arabia, and then report to a North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) meeting in Brussels before returning to Washington.

26 U.S. Jews Held Captive Nine Hours

TEL AVIV (UPI) — "I wanted to see the Suez Canal, but that wasn't the way I had in mind," Warren Sachs, a 28-year-old doctor from Virginia Beach, Va., said.

Sachs was one of 26 American Jews held by Egyptian troops for nine hours Tuesday when their tourist bus strayed into Arab territory in the Sinai Desert.

"They treated us as well as if it had been Israelis," he said after the all-male group of tourists returned to hotels in Tel Aviv to rejoin their waiting wives.

The tourists and 14 Israeli escorts fell into Arab hands when the bus went too far down a Sinai road, inadvertently crossed a narrow U.N. buffer zone and entered an area held by troops of Egypt's 2nd Army.

Marshall Grossman, 33, of Los Angeles, said his first reaction was "utter disbelief because the United Nations had waved us down the road and the next thing we knew we were surrounded by Egyptian soldiers."

"We sat in the desert for two hours until they decided what they wanted to do with us—under heavy guard, machine guns and automatic rifles," Grossman said.

He said the Americans, who were on a United Jewish Appeal (UJA) young leadership tour of Israeli frontline positions, were then blindfolded and driven to Egyptian headquarters at Ismailia on the West Bank of the Suez Canal.

"We stayed there for about five hours where they fed us, gave us beverages and subjected us to some interrogation," Grossman said.

Irwin Alterman, a 33-year-old attorney from Detroit, Mich., said the ordeal began when an Egyptian truck blocked the path of the bus on a narrow blacktop road in the northern Sinai at about 11 a.m. He said the Jews were released at 8 p.m. and reached Israeli-held territory an hour later.

"On the bus leaving we asked the (Egyptian) colonel political questions," Alterman said. "He made a little speech that they wanted peace. One of his questions was who do the Israelis think won the war. We told him the Israelis are confused as we understand it and no one really knows."

He said the tourists didn't get much of a chance to go sightseeing during their stay in Egyptian territory. "We were bindfolded on the way in and it was night on the way out so we didn't see very much," he said.

British Campaign in Homestretch

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath and Labor party leader Harold Wilson today went into the last day of campaigning for Britain's national elections with both predicting victory in the polls.

Heath, looking cool and confident, said he expects to win by "a substantial majority." Wilson claimed "a massive swing" back to Labor.

Jeremy Thorpe, leader of the third-ranking Liberal party, buoyed by an apparent surge of support, said, "I believe the Liberal moment has come."

Britons will vote Thursday in parliamentary elections to decide which party will leave the nation out of an industrial crisis that has browned out cities, crippled industry and threatened to leave millions jobless.

Heath dissolved parliament and ordered the election after the nation's 269,000 coal miners escalated a 13-week slowdown into a full-scale strike Feb. 10.

Three new opinion polls today indicated Heath's governing Conservatives were leading, but by narrowing margins. They also indicated the Liberal bandwagon may be slowing.

An Opinion Research Center poll gave the Conservatives 36.5 per cent, Labor 35 per cent and Liberals 25.5 per cent.

A Louis Harris poll put Conservative strength at 38 per cent, Labor 34.5 per cent and Liberals 25 per cent, while a National Opinion poll gave the Conservatives 39.9 per cent, Labor 37.1 per cent and the Liberals 21.3 per cent.

Heath and Wilson, after attending their final London news conferences this morning, planned to wind up their campaigns in their own voting districts.

The prime minister was heading for the middle class London suburb of Sidcup and the Labor leader for Huyton, a working class suburb of Liverpool.

Thorpe, fighting to hold his dangerously marginal parliamentary seat in North Devon, was spending the entire day canvassing for votes there.

Negotiations in Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The government of Emperor Haile Selassie sent a peace delegation today to negotiate with rebel troops holding Ethiopia's second largest city in an uprising over a pay dispute.

An official government statement said the delegation was flying to Asmara, the site of a U.S. satellite tracking station, to discuss the crisis with the rebels.

Authorities warned an estimated 1,100 American military personnel and their families in the city of 250,000 to obey "common sense" rules and stay clear of the fracas.

(In Washington, the State Department reported only "fragmentary and inconclusive" information on the uprising, but said, "there seems to be no danger to Americans.")

A brigade of about 5,000 troops from Ethiopia's 2nd Army Division seized Asmara Tuesday in a bloodless takeover to press demands for better salaries and living conditions.

The rebels, apparently led by sergeants and low-ranking officers, imprisoned division commander Gen. Seyoum Gedla-Giorgis and seized the post office, airport, banks and other government buildings.

The soldiers then isolated Asmara by cutting air and ground traffic in and out of the city, 450 miles north of the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa.

The mutinous troops went on radio Tuesday night to pledge their allegiance to Haile Selassie, but then issued two dozen demands for higher salaries and better living conditions.

New York Resort Owners Begin Shortage Campaign

By the Associated Press

Nervous businessmen in two famous New York state resort areas have begun a campaign against real and imagined consequences of a gasoline shortage this summer.

The uncertainty over fuel supplies have already cut into winter tourism in the picturesque Adirondack Mountain village of Lake Placid and Catskill Mountain communities like Monticello and Liberty.

"It's the anticipatory drop-off that we're concerned about this summer, rather than what's already occurred," said Mrs. Jean Rosenheck, whose husband owns the Holiday Mountain Motor Lodge in Monticello.

"Gasoline and snow, that's like two sharp sticks poked in each eye," Luke Patnode, Lake Placid's publicity director, said.

"There's a fear, Mrs. Rosenheck said, "a fear of spending, a fear of gasoline. Each of us has his own demon that he's afraid of, whether it's this business, or her husband's job."

Both areas, 250 miles apart, have one thing in common—tourism.

In the Catskills, hundreds of merchants, fuel handlers and bankers have banded together to spend millions of dollars buying gasoline wholesale to ensure hoped-for tourists a fuel supply.

Massive advertising campaigns have been directed at metropolitan New York City where long lines at service stations and short supplies have discouraged travel to the Catskills.

While some businessmen reported tourist traffic from various points off as much as 50 per cent, none could explain the full economic situation.

"How do you know who to believe?" asked Paul Grossinger, about the confusion of information about gasoline supplies.

Grossinger, the owner of a well known Catskill resort, expressed optimism, although he said the shortage has deprived him of as many as 300 weekend guests at his 400-room hotel.

"I feel sure this thing will find a level and be bearable to live with," he said. "I think the government is going to have to do it, because neither the public nor the gasoline dealers are going to take this sort of thing."

Hotels and motels, among the hardest hit, have urged tourists to take buses instead of automobiles. Tourism inflates the 53,000 population of Sullivan County six-fold in the summer.

Still others make special arrangements with service stations to supply guests with return-trip gasoline.

Shortline buslines reported adding five buses to its daily Catskill routes and five weekend charter trips.

Ski business is off as much as 40 per cent, despite adequate snow, said Benjamin Kaplan, Monticello's publicity director. Reservations are down for summer lodgings.

"We don't know yet how much they're off, because some people make tentative reservations at this point, so we can't analyze it. I imagine they will be off. They're all feeling it," he said.

Leon Greenberg, who heads the Catskill Resort Association, said more than 600 member merchants have vowed to purchase fuel wholesale and supply service stations. "We're going to spend millions."

Monticello Mayor Ann Kaplan said after a recent meeting with gasoline tradesmen, "The sentiment among the gas station owners was: 'give us the gas and we'll pump it.' The dealers said, 'we get bigger allocations and we'll pass it along'."

To the north, in Lake Placid, Patnode said, "It's scared everybody. Our problem is that while we have enough gas here, we have to convince everybody."

Along with the fuel, Lake Placid has had problems with snow. "There have been about four major, heavy thaws," Patnode said. "The weather and the fear of running out of gas, the emotional impact, are all part of it."

DONORS AT HIGH FALLS — During a single evening in High Falls recently, enough blood was donated by volunteer donors of the High Falls Civic Association to cover over 100 senior citizens enrolled in the Ulster County Blood Bank Group Program. Richard Murphy (L) of High Falls and Mrs. Louis Crepet of High Falls were among the donors. Technicians Judy Burnett and William DeSauna from the Ellenville Community Hospital drew the blood. Paltz Test Results

NEW PALTZ

A Suffolk County police officer has attained the top mark on the Civil Service examination for Village of New Paltz police chief, it was announced at the Monday night meeting of the board.

Michael Shaner, who lists an Ellenville address, had a mark of 83.5 per cent. He was followed by two local men, John Taylor, director of police services for the town of New Paltz, wtih a mark of 81.5 and Joseph Feraca, a detective in the Kingston Police Department, who scored 73.0 per cent.

Harold Bowers, who took the test but did not pass it, is the incumbent New Paltz Village police chief, at an annual salary of $12,500.

The village board can appoint any one of the three men on the list, but not necessarily the highest one. The board reserved decision on that appointment, however, pending consolidation talks with the town which have been in progress for some time and are said to be entering a stage of "definite signs of progress."

In another police-related matter at the village board meeting, the village police cadets were singled out for praise for work in assisting the regular police force. Composed of high school and college age volunteers, the cadets assist the police in their more routine duties but in recent weeks have been particularly helpful in solving burglaries. Members of the cadets were specifically cited for solving a burglary at a village jewelry store. Thousands of dollars worth of jewels were found in an alleyway last week.

The board also approved a schedule of fees on impounded cars. Previously, the owner was liable only to a three or five dollar fine when his car was towed away for being illegally parked or abandoned. It will now cost him a dollar a day for every day the village impounds the car.

Village Attorney Jack Van announced that the village had completed acquisition of land for Fuller Road.

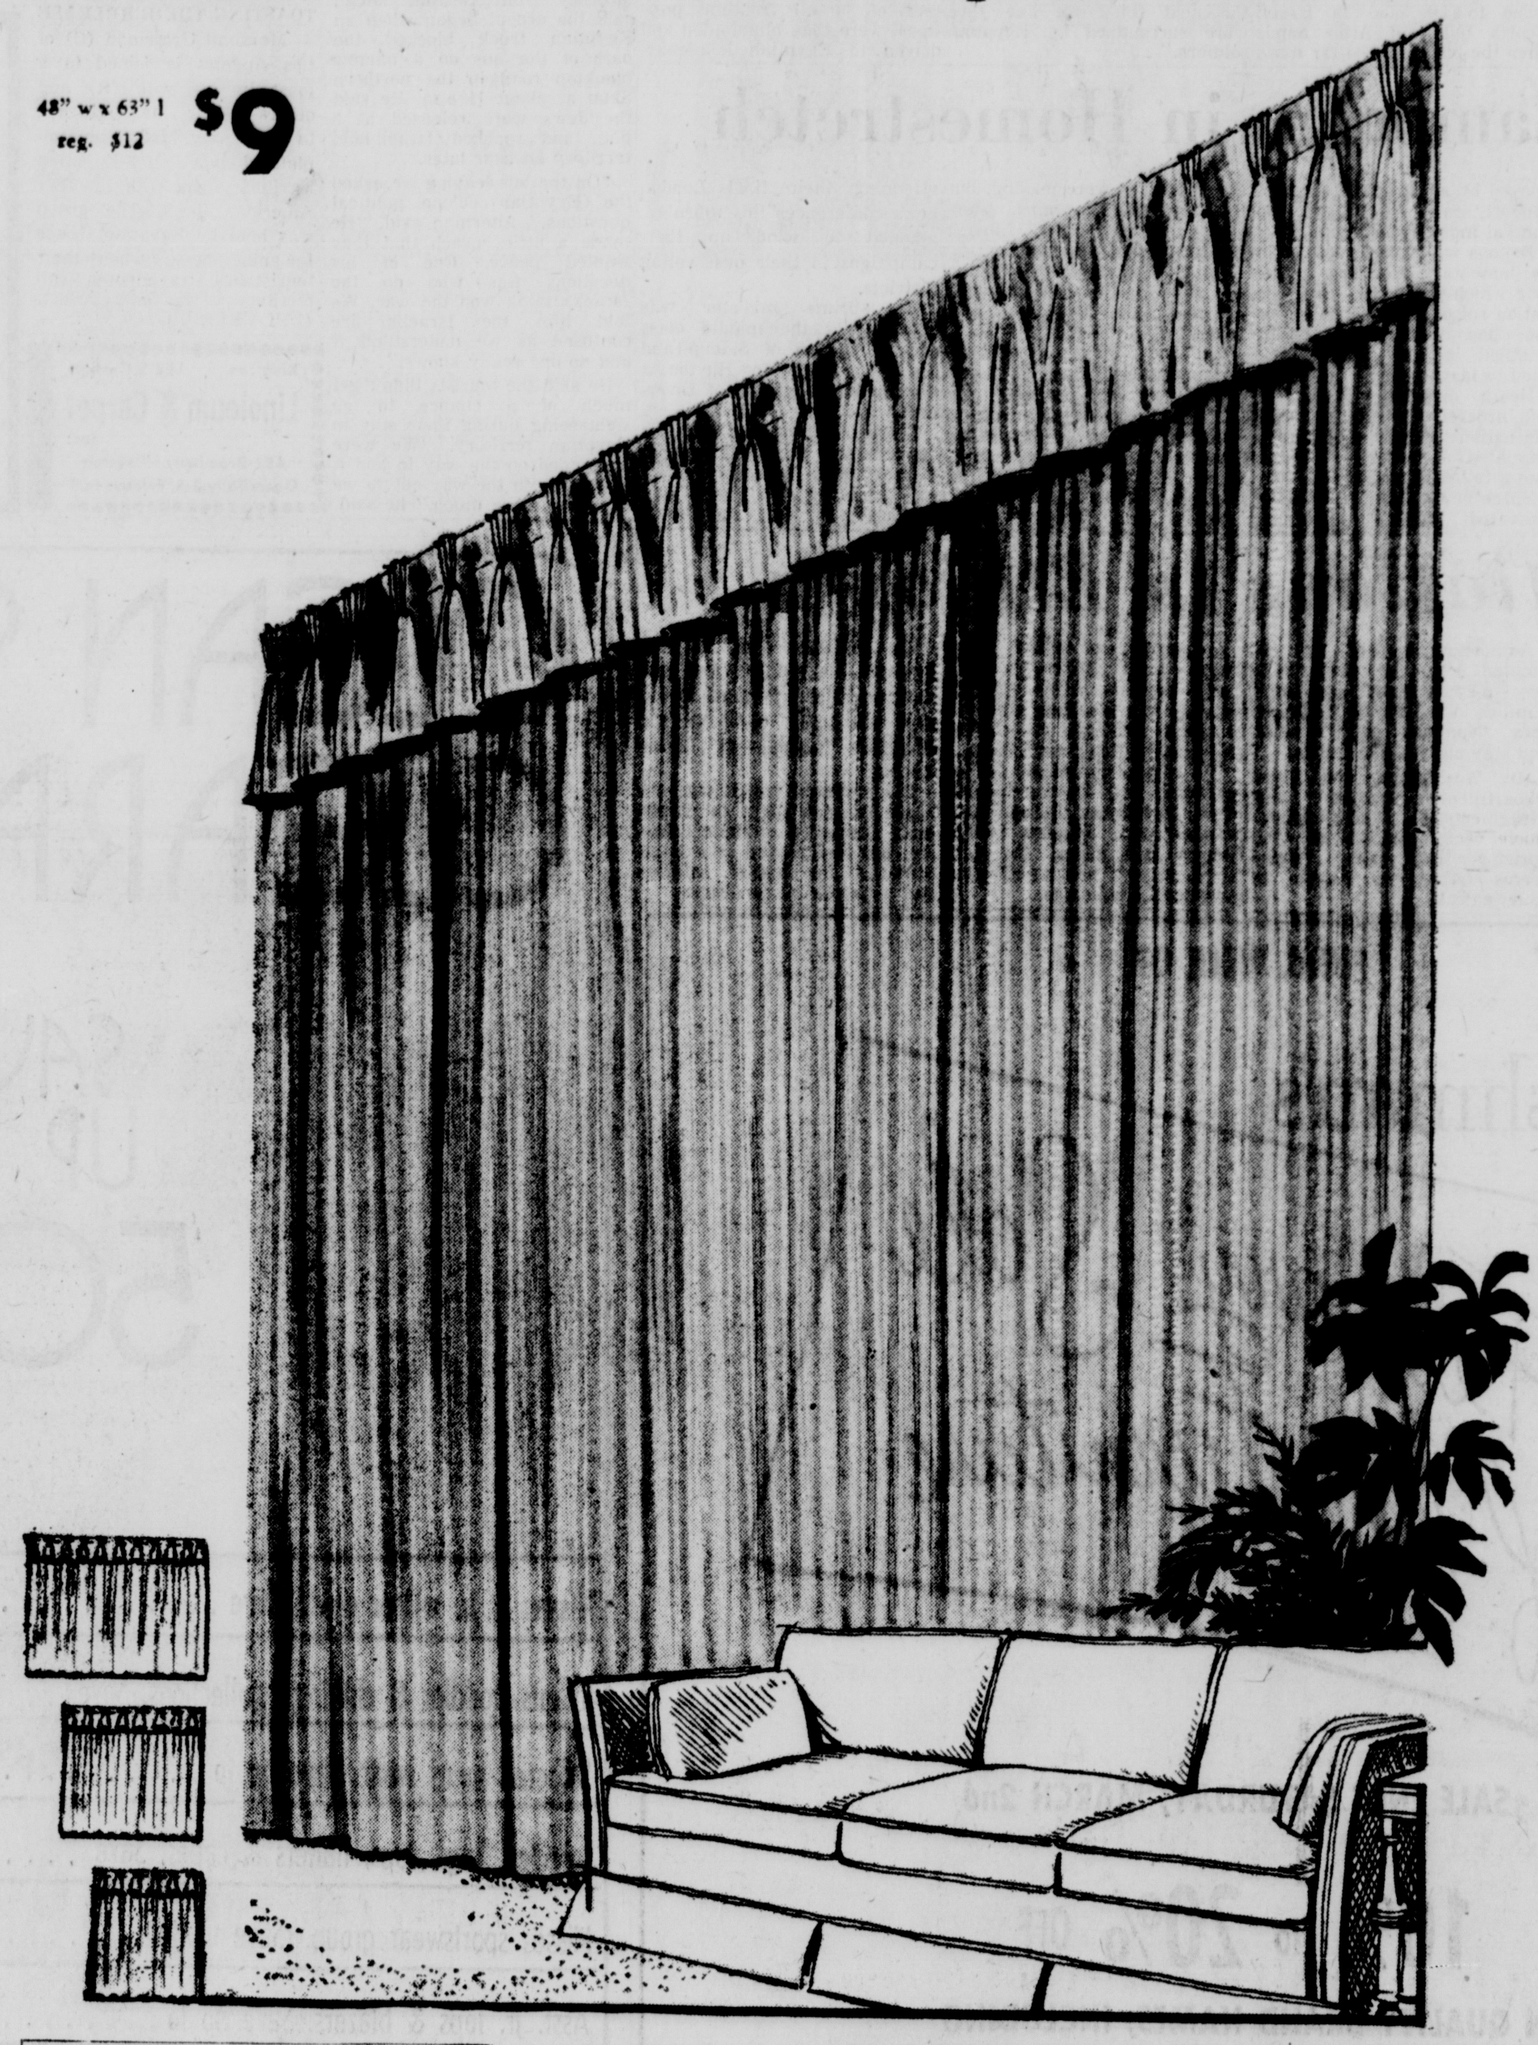

The board approved a proposed budget of $22,000 for the joint town-village recreation commission, an increase of about $4,000 from last year.

There was a discussion of possible sites for a senior citizen park. Lincoln Igou, a village trustee, has been named liaison between the village board and a group of New Paltz College students who have as a term project the establishment of some amenities for senior citizens. Mayor Henry DuBois has been meeting with the students and discussing outdoor recreation for senior citizens.

And, it was announced that the village will have a St. Patrick's Day Parade, March 17. Details will be forthcoming.

HAPPY 60TH — New York Governor Malcolm Wilson blows out the candles on his birthday cake during a brief ceremony in his capitol building office. The governor is 60 years old. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Gov. Wilson Outlines Plan

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Governor Wilson's proposal that the state finance transportation projects on an out-of-pocket cash basis marks a dramatic switch from a long-standing policy of state borrowing for such expenditures.

The change, which fiscal experts say will save the state interest costs but slow up the pace of transportation planning, was necessary after the voters turned down a proposed $3.5 billion transit bond plan last fall.

The specifics of Wilson's proposal for the 1974-75 state budget year—which were unveiled by the governor Tuesday—outline state spending of $3.6 million for mass transit improvements upstate and $64.5 million for highways.

As an incentive to local communities or regional transportation authorities to undertake new public transit projects, Wilson proposes an expansion of the state share of mass transit projects financed under federal aid programs.

The local share of mass transit improvements would be reduced to 5 per cent with the state picking up the difference between the local and federal shares.

The federal government contributes 70 per cent under the Federal Highway Act of 1973 and 80 per cent to mass transit improvements under the Mass Transportation Aid Program.

Previously the state's share was only 15 per cent of the total cost of mass transit improvements.

Localities finding capital improvement funds hard to come by would get added incentive to go forward with other transportation projects from another Wilson proposal.

As outlined by the governors' fiscal aides, the proposal calls for the appropriation of an additional $233.7 million to prefinance the federal share of municipal and state highway projects—in effect a loan to local governments in anticipation of eventual repayment with federal dollars.

The shift from the sale of state bonds to finance transportation construction to a "capital grant program" means project costs will be paid out of current tax monies instead of by long-term borrowing.

The switch means that the state will save the interest costs that must be paid on bond funds, but the speed with which the state can move forward with its transportation master plan will be limited by the availability of cash-in-hand funds.

A spokesman for the governor said, "this approach may mean the delay of projects which localities cannot afford that would have been justified by their long-term effect on the area's economic well-being."

Right - Hand Turns on Red Signals

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—The legislature has voted to permit New York State motorists to make right-hand turns on red traffic signals at designated intersections.

A bill given final legislative approval by the Senate Tuesday and sent to Gov. Malcolm Wilson would authorize localities to post right-turn-on-red signs at intersections that local officials considered to be sufficiently safe.

"This is totally a local-option bill," said its sponsor, Sen. Lloyd H. Paterson, R-Niagara Falls. "It's a great bill for saving gasoline and for cutting down on air pollution."

A similar measure submitted by Paterson last year passed through both houses but was vetoed by former governor Nelson A. Rockefeller.

That bill, however, would have granted blanket authorization for such right turns unless signs were posted prohibiting them.

The senator said his proposed new law, which would take effect Oct. 1, has been approved by the state Transportation Department.

Among the bills passed by the Senate Tuesday and sent to the Assembly were measures that would:

—Establish special medical malpractice panels within each judicial district of state Supreme Court. These panels would attempt to mediate all medical malpractice suits within their jurisdiction.

—Raise the lump-sum death benefit for survivors of volunteer firemen killed in the line of duty to $5,000 from $1,000. An identical bill was vetoed by Rockefeller last year.

$1 Million for the Arts

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Opera singer Beverly Sills has a political daydream. Dressed in her finest clothes, she sings a beautiful aria in the chambers of the state legislature.

The assemblymen and senators respond, not with a standing ovation, but with an unprecedented $100 million appropriation for the arts.

But Miss Sills follows the daydream to a logical concusioln and finds the cost of producing the special legislative opera goes over $100 million.

So the legislature's opera company joins other arts organization in having a deficit.

Miss Sills told about her daydream Tuesday when she joined a statewide arts organization asking the legislature to support Gov. Malcolm Wilson's budget request of $30.5 million for the arts.

Wilson's proposal would more than double the $15 million appropriation approved by the legislature for the State Council on the Arts last year.

His request represents one of the major spending increases in his proposed 1974-75 budget that the legislature will be cutting and approving in March.

Miss Sills spoke to more than 300 artists and art-lovers who came to the state Capitol in support of the arts Tuesday in a lobbying effort promoted by the Concerned Citizens for the Arts.

Miss Sills, who sings for the Metropolitan Opera in New York City, praised the governor and legislature for beginning to subsidize the arts.

"We have come to recognize our artists as part of our national heritage," Miss Sills said. "Although we may be remembered as the country that put men on the moon ... art is the signature of civilization."

Amyas Ames chairman of the Concerned Cititens, said the $30.5 million is "the irreducible minimum" needed for arts in the state. "The real need is over $40 million," added Ames, who is chairman of Lincoln Center in New York City.

more

Ames said art organizations are facing a financial crisis brought on by strikes and rising costs of operations.

In 1970, the legislature approved Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's request for council funds to be distributed by the council to museums, performing arts groups and other arts organizations in the state.

The state provides more aid for the arts than all other states combined, according to an aide to Sen. William T. Conklin, R-Brooklyn, who spoke in favor of the $30.5 million request.

County Official Accused In Murder of Ex-Actress

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (UPI) — The case of the mild-looking county official accused of using a razor-sharp machete to hack to death a blonde former Broadway actress on her front porch steps has hit this town like a bombshell.

Underneath the calm atmosphere of the tourist-lined streets in the nation's oldest city there is a ferment among the 12,352 year-round residents about the Athalia Ponsell Lindsley murder case.

County Manager Alan G. Stanford Jr. pleaded innocent Tuesday to first degree murder charges in Mrs. Lindsley's death and was released under $20,000 bond to return home to his wife and three daughters on quiet Marine Street.

Stanford, 49, who is on a leave of absence from his $20,000 job pending the outcome of the case, has denied any part in the Jan. 23 murder of the 56-year-old former actress and Powers model who had been his next-door neighbor for about two years.

"I am totally innocent of this thing and I'll put a lot of trust in the Lord," Stanford said from his jail cell shortly before his arraignment.

Facts are hard to come by around the St. Johns County courthouse where Sheriff Dudley Garrett and five deputies have been working around the clock investigating the Lindsley case.

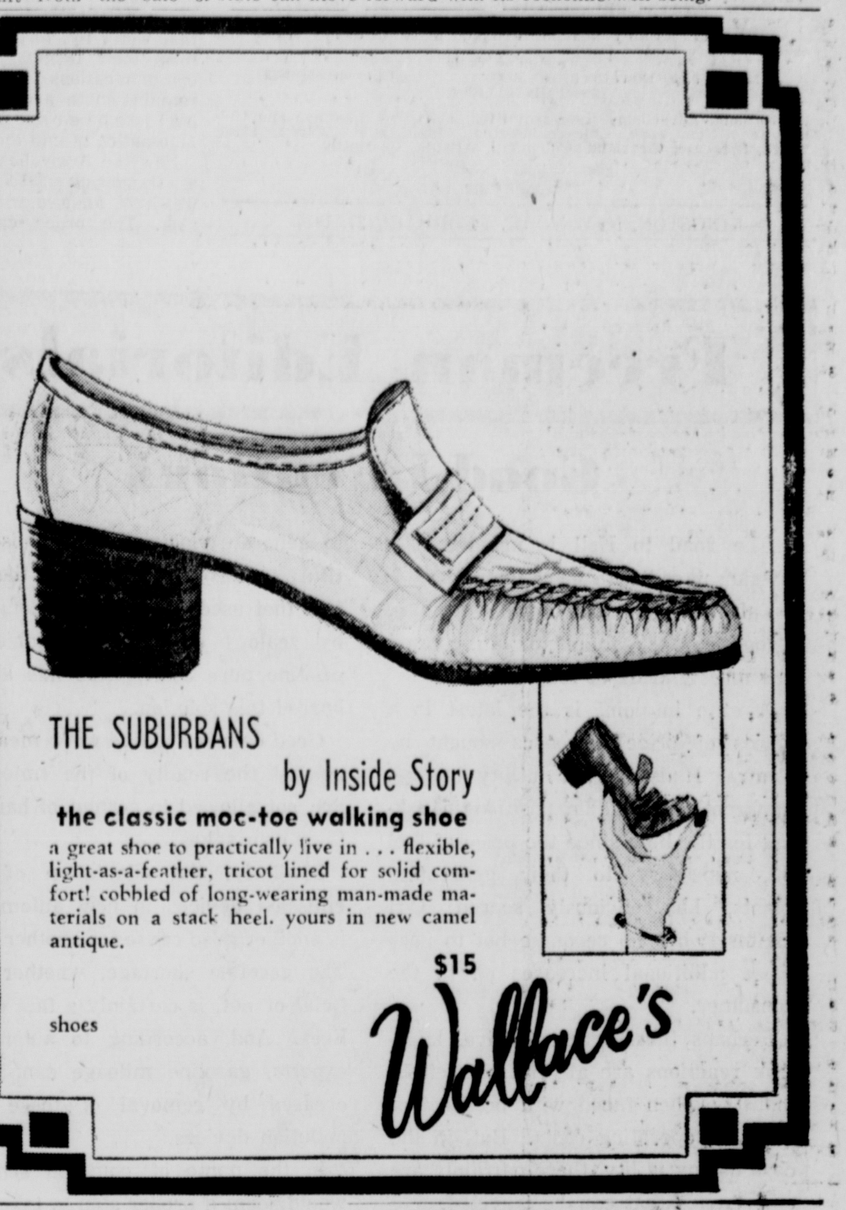

Garrett refuses to confirm or deny a report in the local daily newspaper, the St. Augustine Record, that he has found the machete and blood-stained clothes used by Mrs. Lindsley's killer.

"I can't comment one way or another on that since I will be giving testimony on the evidence when the case comes to trial," Garrett said.

The sheriff admits that Mrs. Lindsley had some run-ins with her neighbors about the dogs she kept in her yard, barking during the night. But Garrett will not speculate about a possible motive for the attack which left Mrs. Lindsley nearly decapitated in daylight with the mail she had just taken from her front porch mail box under her body.

Mrs. Lindsley was the wife of former St. Augustine Mayor James Lindsley, a real estate dealer who was cleared of suspicion in the murder when he took a lie detector test.

Three months before her death, Mrs. Lindsley had appeared before the county commission questioning the qualifications of Stanford, an engineer by profession, to serve as county manager. Stanford is not a registered civil engineer in the state, but had promised the commission at the time of his hiring that he would study to become a licensed engineer.

Good Intentions

The road to Hell is not the only avenue paved with good intentions. It is also evident that in the guise of "good causes" mankind can commit the most glaring of folly.

A case in point is the latest in a series of price increases sought by Central Hudson. The utility has an apparently justifiable position in asking for the hike since the price of fuel oil, necessary to their generating plants, has obviously soared. C-H claims it has no recourse but to pass these additional increases on to the consumer.

Perhaps these unimaginative, knee-jerk reactions are all that are left to industry when faced with prospect of climbing operating costs. But, in the case of any utility, there certainly are other roads that can be traveled.

One of these is the return to coal to generate electricity. Coal is plentiful; coal is cheap and was the original fuel used. But the headlong rush by zealous ecologists to achieve a pristine pure atmosphere has all but barred this solution.

Good causes are fine when measured against the reality of the times and are not allowed to get out of hand for their own sakes.

Similarly, the adaptation of auto emission devices in new automobiles is another good cause for another time. The gasoline shortage, whether artificial or not, is certainly a fact of our lives. And, according to automobile experts, gasoline mileage can be increased by removal of these anti-pollution devices.

In the name of common sense it would seem a proper step to take until the gasoline situation is remedied.

Changes Without Crisis

The energy crisis is only the latest of many indications that Americans tend not to think or plan in long-range terms.

The meeting between Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and several Latin American foreign ministers illustrates this outlook. The press has treated the meetings more or less as simply one of those many gatherings that foreign ministers seem to relish. At such conferences an agenda is established, issues are laid out for scrutiny, much toasting occurs; then everyone goes home.

But given the administration's past attitude toward Latin America—an attitude that might be described as "benign neglect" — the present meeting may represent an important turning point. This seems all the more likely in light of moves made recently toward possible rapprochement with Cuba. There are signs that the hard-line U.S. policy of the past 15 year may be on the way out.

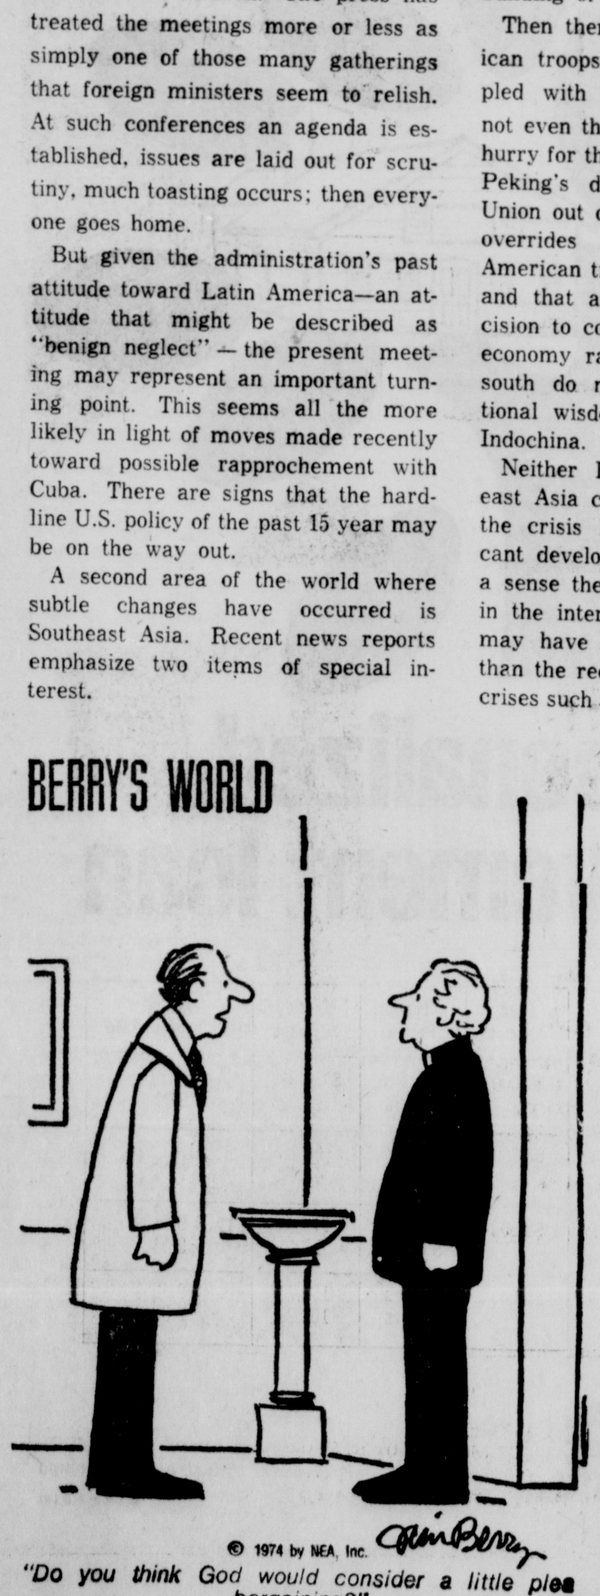

A second area of the world where subtle changes have occurred is Southeast Asia. Recent news reports emphasize two items of special interest.

There are indications that North Vietnam's leaders may not be as intent on renewing full-scale assaults in South Vietnam as many in the West have assumed. Plans disclosed recently show a greater concentration of money and manpower on the economic rebuilding of North Vietnam.

Then there is the news that American troops remain in Thailand, coupled with informed speculation that not even the Chinese are in any great hurry for these forces to be withdrawn. Peking's desire to keep the Soviet Union out of Southeast Asia evidently overrides its distaste for having American troops there. Both this item and that about Hanoi's apparent decision to concentrate on the domestic economy rather than the war in the south do not jibe with the conventional wisdom about the situation in Indochina.

Neither Latin America nor Southeast Asia currently rides the crest of the crisis list, yet there are significant developments in both places. In a sense these rather low-key changes in the international scheme of things may have more far-reaching effects than the recurrent and well publicized crises such as those in the Middle East.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

The Army's Swimming Trucks Don't

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Waste has reached its most alarming peak in the armed forces. In the name of defense, the brass hats have built planes that won't fly, torpedoes that miss their targets, a space communications system that remains mute and automatic helicopters that fall automatically into the ocean.

Now the Army has ordered a staggering $91.8 million worth of aquatic trucks that sink. The order called for rugged, battlefield-worthy trucks with a "floating and swimming capability for crossing calm water barriers."

But on test runs, the drivers often found themselves in water above their ankles. Once the test observers stood by, mouths agape, as a huge tanker unit "swamped and sank" in the Chesapeake Bay.

The swimming trucks, known in the Pentagon as "GOER Vehicles," were developed by and purchased from the Caterpillar Tractor Company. Each consists of a diesel engine tractor which pulls either an eight-ton cargo body, a 2,500-gallon tanker or a 10-ton wrecker.

The first test vehicles apparently performed reasonably well, according to Army documents, even during "field" trials in Vietnam. But now that they are being mass produced, they are falling apart.

Internal reports prepared by Col Lewington Ponder of the Army's Test and Evaluation Command state that "the safety of water operations is jeopardized by excessive steering angles; . . . inadequacy of the bilge pumps; water leakage through the axle housing shields; and unbalance caused by the . . . power package (on the wrecker)."

Therefore, counseled the colonel, "the vehicle (should) be prohibited from swimming until deficiencies . . . are corrected." If the Army insists on taking the aquatic trucks into the water, he wrote, only "well-trained and experienced driver personnel" should be used.

Presumably, he meant that the drivers should be able to swim.

The fact that the swimming trucks can't swim is but one of their many failures. The official report also lists these additional "deficiencies" and "shortcomings":

— "The service brake system is unreliable and unsafe when the vehicles are operated in relatively deep, cohesive mud."

— "The steering system is unreliable and under certain conditions constitutes a safety hazard."

— "The crane (on the wrecker) is unsafe and unreliable . . . due to tipping tendencies under certain . . . conditions."

— "The personnel heater did not properly heat the vehicle soft top enclosed cab or provide adequate windshield defrosting."

— "The alternator is not durable and requires excessive maintenance."

— "The high noise level in the cab is a health hazard to both the driver and co-driver."

— "The transmission cover fasteners allow the cover to bounce free and strike the crew."

— "The tractor frame is not durable. The main frame structures cracked on four different vehicles."

— "The fan drive system design is inadequate . . . The fuel tanks are not durable."

Nevertheless, Army spokesmen insist they are pleased with the GOER trucks. Their "extensive testing program," they said, had produced "an impressive record of low maintenance, high reliability and long life." They described the documents we have quoted as an "interim report," which will be used "to assure that required corrections are made as early in the production process as possible."

A spokesman for Caterpillar told us the shortcomings revealed in tests weren't the result of a deficient vehicle but the normal problems of mass production. The truck that sank, he said, was the fault of the operator, not the vehicle.

But meanwhile, the test reports show clearly that the swimming trucks, in their present condition, can't swim safely.

FOOTNOTE: From military generals to carrier admirals, the brass hats have constantly clamored for pet weapons which have turned out to be impractical or obsolete. In some instances, their greatest value has been to give some military chief an excuse to demand more money, more men, more gold braid. Occoasionally, the Defense Department has rushed ahead with new weapons before they have been proven. Its warehouses hold millions worth of spare parts for cancelled and antiquated weapons.

No Raise for Congress

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The terror of facing angry voters in the 1974 election after voting themselves a fat pay boost seems certain to force the Democratic Congress to delay the congressional salary boost until early 1975 in opposition to President Nixon's support for it now.

No issue has produced so much cloakroom anguish as the 1974 pay increase. Controlling Senate Democrats, however, now see possible political gain at Mr. Nixon's expense by postponing the congressional part of the increase while letting admittedly overdue increases for federal judges and middle-to-top level federal employes take effect April 1.

The pay boost is politically explosive. Polls show voter approval of Congress as an institution at an all-time low of 20 per cent—lower than even the President's standing.

Hence, Democratic Congressmen are terrified at the prospect of campaigning this fall after raising their own pay from the present $42,500 to $45,700 (which would increase in steps to $52,800 by 1976).

Either House can kill the President's proposals by simple majority vote. By taking that course, Democrats can blame the President for the non-congressional raise while telling voters they refused to raise their own pay in 1974, despite 30 per cent inflation since the last increase.

That argument is reinforced by this little-known fact: of the President's seven-member salary commission, the only two who opposed all raises (costing $34 million the first two years) were Democrats—lawyers Edward H. Foley of Washington, D.C., and Joseph F. Meglen of Billings, Mont.

A House resolution to kill all raises is not expected to reach the floor by the March 9 deadline. But Sen. Gale McGee of Wyoming, chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee, will probably beat the Senate deadline with a resolution postponing the congressional raise. That is expected to pass, giving Democrats yet another issue for 1974.

A footnote: A politically sensitive provision that Democrats will let go into effect April 1, buried in the President's pay-increase proposals, would raise Mr. Nixon's own retirement pay from the present $60,000 to $64,500. That results from a Nixon administration first-term bill raising annual retirement pay of ex-Presidents from $25,000 to the pay of a cabinet member. The new pay raises will lift cabinet members to $64,500.

Aggravation over the way court-appointed experts have investigated the 18½-minute erasure is not limited to the White House but also includes the special prosecutor's office.

Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski's lieutenants are privately confident the panel of experts ultimately will be upheld in rejecting White House claims that the 18½-minute buzz on the June 20 tape was accidental. But the prosecutors are grumbling that the experts let themselves in for unnecessary criticism.

The prosecutors agree with one point by Nicholas Wade's article in the Feb. 22 Science magazine which criticizes the experts: the panel should not have submitted its Jan. 15 press release explaining the erasure without accompanying technical details.

That breach of scientific procedure was caused by pressure from Judge John Sirica to report quickly. But the experts may not have completed the technical report because they spent too much time on private business pursuits and not enough on their court-appointed task.

A footnote: The technician whose findings are reported in Science magazine—Allan D. Bell, president of Dektor Counterintelligence and Security, Inc. is not Mr. Nixon's technical expert on the tapes. Just assigned that role is Dr. Michael Hecker, senior research engineer at Stanford (Calif.) Research Institute who flew here Thursday to confer with Nixon lawyer James St. Clair.

Pennsylvania labor leaders, in hot water for endorsing liberal Republican Sen. Richard Schweiker's reelection, failed in a backstage attempt to get the AFL-CIO's national political operatives to bail them out.

The heat has been on Michael Johnson, executive vice president of the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO and a member of the Democratic National Committee. He engineered a state AFL-CIO endorsement of Schweiker before the Democrats knew what happened.

Democratic politicians and even some labor leaders were outraged, feeling that Watergate has made any Republican—even the highly popular Schweiker—vulnerable. Some liberal Democrats contend Johnson should lose his seat on the Democratic National Committee for the apostasy.

Making Joynson's position even shakier is the fact that one of Pennsylvania's most dynamic figures—Herbert Denenberg, who as state insurance commissioner is a nationally renowned consumer advocate—may seek the Democratic nomination for Senator.

Consequently, Johnson urged the AFL-CIO's national Committee on Political Education (COPE) to summon Denenberg to Washington to talk him out of running. At that closed-door session, Denenberg was promised labor support for the Senate when the term of Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott expires in 1976 (Scott then will be age 75) if Denenberg passes up running against Schweiker this time.

It did not work. The independent-minded Denenberg made no commitments and strongly implied he would challenge Schweiker this year.

Some Events Symbolic of the Times

Small events are symbols of the times . . .

The wife swung her feet off the bed. Lazily, she scratched her scalp. She reached for a pink quilted robe. The features sagged toward the chin. She heard a knee snap when she stood. Then Louise remembered—this was the start of that second honeymoon.

She found the cord holding the drapes. Like eyelids, they peeled away from the scene. From the motel window, the Wasatch Mountains scratched the pale sky. The snow was blinding. She squinted at the beauty of it. The second honeymoon had been a long time coming.

Charlie had driven two days, begging gasoline, to reach this motel. They had made it on their 19th anniversary. Louise loved the majesty of the mountains, the clear air, the snow silence.

She waddled to the bed. "Charlie," she murmured. "Honeybun." He lay haunched on his side, the blankets under the chin. She pushed. "Charlie," she said, "get up. Wait till you see this view." Charlie was in no mood to look.

He was dead. His cheeks were colder than the room. Louise tried to scream. Instead, she fell into a fit of coughing. She called the front desk. "Something's the matter with my husband," she said. "Get a doctor. This is an emergency. He's cold as ice."

There was lots of action. A doctor arrived. He turned Charlie on his back and unbuttoned the striped pajamas. He was a middle-aged man who had driven too far too fast. The manager arrived. Two policemen in galoshes stomped in.

Everybody asked a lot of questions. Louise apologized for the way she looked. She went to the bathroom and combed her hair and put on lipstick. The coroner arrived. "Madame," he said, "it's a hundred to one that your husband had a coronary in his sleep. I will have to do an autopsy. Be finished by 10 in the morning. So sad — a second honeymoon."

Louise looked out the window. She felt too nervous to weep. The coroner walked over. "I can ship him home by air, and you can drive, if you wish. I'll do whatever you wish."

Suddenly, she shook with fright. Louise stared at the coroner. "Oh, no," she said. "You just put Charlie in the refrigerator room or wherever you do those things. We're paid up here for two weeks and I'm going to enjoy myself." . . .

North of San Francisco, the ladies lunched at the country club. There were six of them — all old. They stooped forward when they walked; they wore hundred dollar pants suits, tiny scintillating shoes with enormous platforms and — the thing they had in common — blue hair.

The six talked simultaneously, but they had been doing this for years and each heard the other five clearly. The black waiter, Tommy, was an old favorite. He knew they would talk diet, order fattening food, coax each other to have dessert, and then move into the game room for an afternoon of gin rummy for nickels and dimes.

Tommy poised his pencil and put on his cast-iron smile. The six could recite the menu from memory, but they studied it as though it was written in Sanskrit. As they read, the conversation continued.

The waiter brought a pot of coffee. He filled the cups until they steamed like black lava. Stella smiled vacantly at her dearest friends as her face slid slowly into the hot cup. The body moved sedately to the left, and fell on the floor.

"Oh, dear!" the hostess said. "Now Stella has fainted. Call somebody. Call Tommy." A few men from other tables came running. One trotted to a phone. One of the women poured French dressing on a deep green salad, and looked at the body. "She's too old for these lunches," she said. "Stella ought to know better."

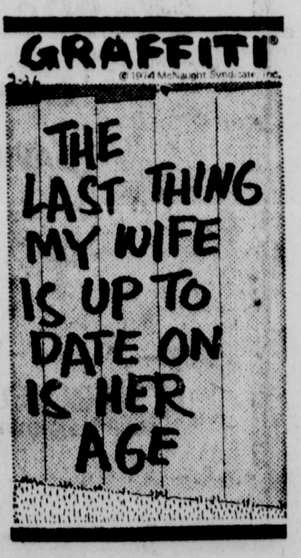

The country club manager was distressed when he saw the ambulance back up to the front entrance. The five cronies talked softly as a doctor examined Stella. He put the stethoscope back in the bag: "This woman is dead," he said, looking around.

The ladies looked up furtively. The doctor took Stella's name, address, next of kin, names of witnesses. "The boys from the ambulance will remove the body," he said.

A meditative hush fell over the luncheon table. The five old women looked at each other. The hostess sighed. "I know what we'll do," she said reassuringly. She called the waiter.

"Tommy," she said, "be a good fellow, will you, and take our cups and saucers and all our things — and move them to a table near the window. If we sit here, well, you know, we'll be depressed by Stella."

Small events, sometimes, are symbols of the times . . .

Letters to the Editor

On Lib Views

Editor, The Freeman:

In this column on Wednesday the 20th you printed a letter signed Ms. Johann Tennyson.

She aired her woman's-lib views re the pro-life rally in Washington. It was something I would expect to read in "Mein Kampf"!

In fact she defied anyone or anything to infringe on her rights as a "human being". One thing she completely overlooked (deliberately) was the human rights of the unborn, who have no one to speak for them except "humans" with a conscience, which she is sadly lacking, beside love, understanding, etc.

I sincerely hope "Ms" Tennyson never has a child which to use her words would be a "sad mistake" (for the child) and God help the father.

MRS. IRENE NELSON

Dedicated Detective

Editor, The Freeman:

In November of 1972 I had the misfortune of being kidnapped, robbed and my car stolen in the City of Kingston.

At this time, Detective Joseph Feraca worked on my case and only through his efforts which meant working after hours and on his day off did the case reach the grand jury.

I hope the people of Kingston realize what a dedicated man they would be losing if he were to resign either one of his jobs as a detective or a member of the Board of Education, which he has served so well.

To Detective Feraca I say fight, but don't switch.

To the City of Kingston I am still waiting for my trial to come up after a year.

Sincerely,
MRS. JOSEPH FABYSACK

NEWSPAPERS SELL THE MOST

Open Letter

Dear Mayor Koenig:

We have heard with apprehension and dismay of the proposed North Front Street Mall. Our members voted unanimously to send a letter to you and the Common Council urging you to defeat any proposals which would permit the building of this mall, for the following reasons:

1. Certainly such a mall would put most of the merchants on North Front Street out of business as, even if they could be relocated in the new complex, the time gap and the greatly increased rentals would be disastrous for these businessmen.

2. The forty or so proposed new shops would probably, instead of bringing in new business, dissipate much of the present Kingston trade and draw business away from existing uptown and Broadway merchants.

3. The uptown Kingston street system has reached the saturation point traffic-wise. Additional vehicular traffic here would probably create another area as congested as Albany Avenue Extension and drive away the very shoppers who are now in town to avoid such conditions.

4. We understand that even with the projected large parking lot which would replace the present North Front Street shops and the roof-top parking at the mall, there would not be enough parking for the projected employees of the new complex, not to mention the shoppers, so that this mall would need the City Parking Garage and other lots now available for uptown shoppers plus another parking lot which the developers are asking the city to give them (at taxpayers' expense!) and would probably then want more buildings in the Stockade Area demolished for more parking.

5. The probability that Urban Renewal funds now allocated to finish sewer and street repair in Kingston would be diverted to this project and this street work would then become another burden to the taxpayers. Perhaps a project of this size would call for even more streets and sewers.

6. A congested mall in the uptown area would not only damage the quality of life, but would drastically depress values of residential properties in a wide vicinity.

7. What with sky-rocketing prices and delays in getting materials there would be a strong probability that this project would never be completed or even started after the exisitng stores are condemned and demolished.

8. A complex so at variance with the ambiance of the Stockade Area would destroy a priceless and irreplaceable heritage . . . the historic old Stockade Area of Kingston, which in recent years has become so much more appreciated and improved and is acknowledged even by the developers, to be the very thing that makes Kinston so attractive to its residents and to an increasing number of tourists.

9. The timing is certainly wrong for such a project. From all over the country there are reports of people moving back to live and shop in the city centers, a trend which has been greatly spurred by the energy crisis, so that we should preserve rather than destroy the city neighborhood feeling.

We respectfully urge you, Mr. Mayor, and members of the Common Council, to consider these points and work to keep Kingston the charming and unique city it now is, instead of letting it become a dull, neutered replica of so many that now exist.

Sincerely yours,
BARBARA R. SHULTZ

Raise the Price

Editor, The Freeman:

Thanks to Mr. Barrecchia for his article in "Editor's Notebook" dealing with the novel "Jaws" and its analogy to the energy crisis gripping our country. It is a thoughtful commentary on American life today. His evaluation of the basis of the fuel situation parallels that of an organization that is trying to do something about it — Irate Consumers of Ulster County. However, I am writing this as an individual.

We have not received a satisfactory justification for the price increase of fuel in view of the profits bonanza of the oil companies. Only a daily barrage of contradictory statements by so-called energy experts or various government spokesmen. It seems that the only remedy the government can offer for shortages of supply of any of our economic ills is to raise retail prices. Yet profits are greater than usual and considered sacred. Ironically, it is usually government bungling and mismanagement of the economy which is the main factor contributing to the problem. And this, coupled with the marriage between the monopolies and government is a combination hard to beat — this includes Congress as well as the Executive branch.

Our organization adopted a resolution supporting the demand of the independent truckers for a roll-back of the price of diesel fuel because this was the only settlement which would not lead to a further increase of consumer prices. Instead the government urged the truckers to add 6 per cent to their bills to the shippers. Unfortunately, the truckers did not receive public support and had to give in to government pressure.

In the course of our petition campaign calling for a rollback of gasoline and home heating fuel prices, we had an opportunity to speak to hundreds of people in our area and while we received an enthusiastic repsonse to the petition, we were struck by the universal mistrust of politicians and the mood of helplessness of the part of so many. Obviously they seek a figure to trust—someone to lead us out of the morass. It is my philosophy that an informed, organized and vocal citizenry can provide the impetus for such leaders to come forward.

This is a year in which many public officials will be seeking re-election and due to the Watergate situation, many politicians are worried about their prospects for re-election. Many changes are possible this year provided the people organize and speak out. Indeed, if we do not, we will be the ones who will shiver in unheated homes and pay outrageous prices for gasoline (when we can get it) instead of those who are to blame for the energy crisis.

Very truly yours,
ESTHER NASON

Shokan Nursery

Editor, The Freeman:

The Committee for the Town of Olive Cooperative Nursery School wishes to take this opportunity to publicly express our appreciation to the Town Board for their cooperation in making space available for our nursery school.

At this time we would also like to thank all those local business people who have shown support for our nursery school by answering our need for financial assistance with their generous contributions. These are:

Frank Gaye, Ronson Piano Hammer Co., Dorothy Negron, D & M Market, Mike's Auto Body, Shokan Stair Builders, Inc., Mr. & Mrs. J. Iapoce.

Those of us on the organizing committee know that our cooperative nursery school, which is to be non-profit and non-discriminatory, will be an asset to our community. We wish to remind those in our community who would like to support our endeavors that even the smallest contributions would be gratefully appreciated.

Sincerely yours,
ELAINE SELDEN

Open Letter

Education Commissioner Ewald Nyquist:

A special in THE DAILY FREEMAN of February 20, 1974, indicated that you had ruled that Chango Hall at the State University College at New Paltz is a racially segregated facility inasmuch as most of the residents were black.

I find your position difficult to understand. While Chango is predominately black, whites are not prevented from living in the dormatory, and some do. In this regard, there hare dormatories on campus which are predominately white, though they do not exclude blacks. These have not been judged to be racially segregated facilities.

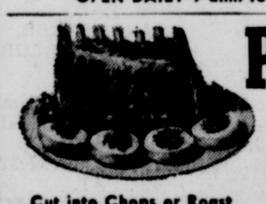

Further, as a white member of the faculty in the Department of African Studies at New Paltz, I have had an opportunity to work with representatives of Chango Hall. They have shown a sincere interest in reaching out toward the wider college community. I wonder how many of us in the white majority would show this same interest under circumstances where we faced the problems of prejudice still met by blacks in their daily life.

In conclusion, I think it would be a serious injustice to dismantle Chango Hall. It serves a very real role in providing alternative housing to facilitate ethnic studies, with activities devoted to Third World cultures, workshops and clubs.

Yours sincerely,
DR. T. NYQUIST

Stockade Group Offers Courses For Six Weeks

KINGSTON

For the 305 students from throughout Ulster County who have signed up for the courses being offered by the local Stockade Committee, the fun of learning Colonial Era crafts, of training as tour guides, and of helping to open a Young People's Museum here, begins this week.

The first series of six weeks long courses began last night with sessions planned Tuesday and Thursday evenings and Saturday mornings on the Senate House grounds (utilizing all buildings in the complex) until completion.

One group of youngsters will be in training for future service as walking tour guides through the Stockade Area, or as guides in the Young People's Museum to be opened in due time in the Senate House barn.

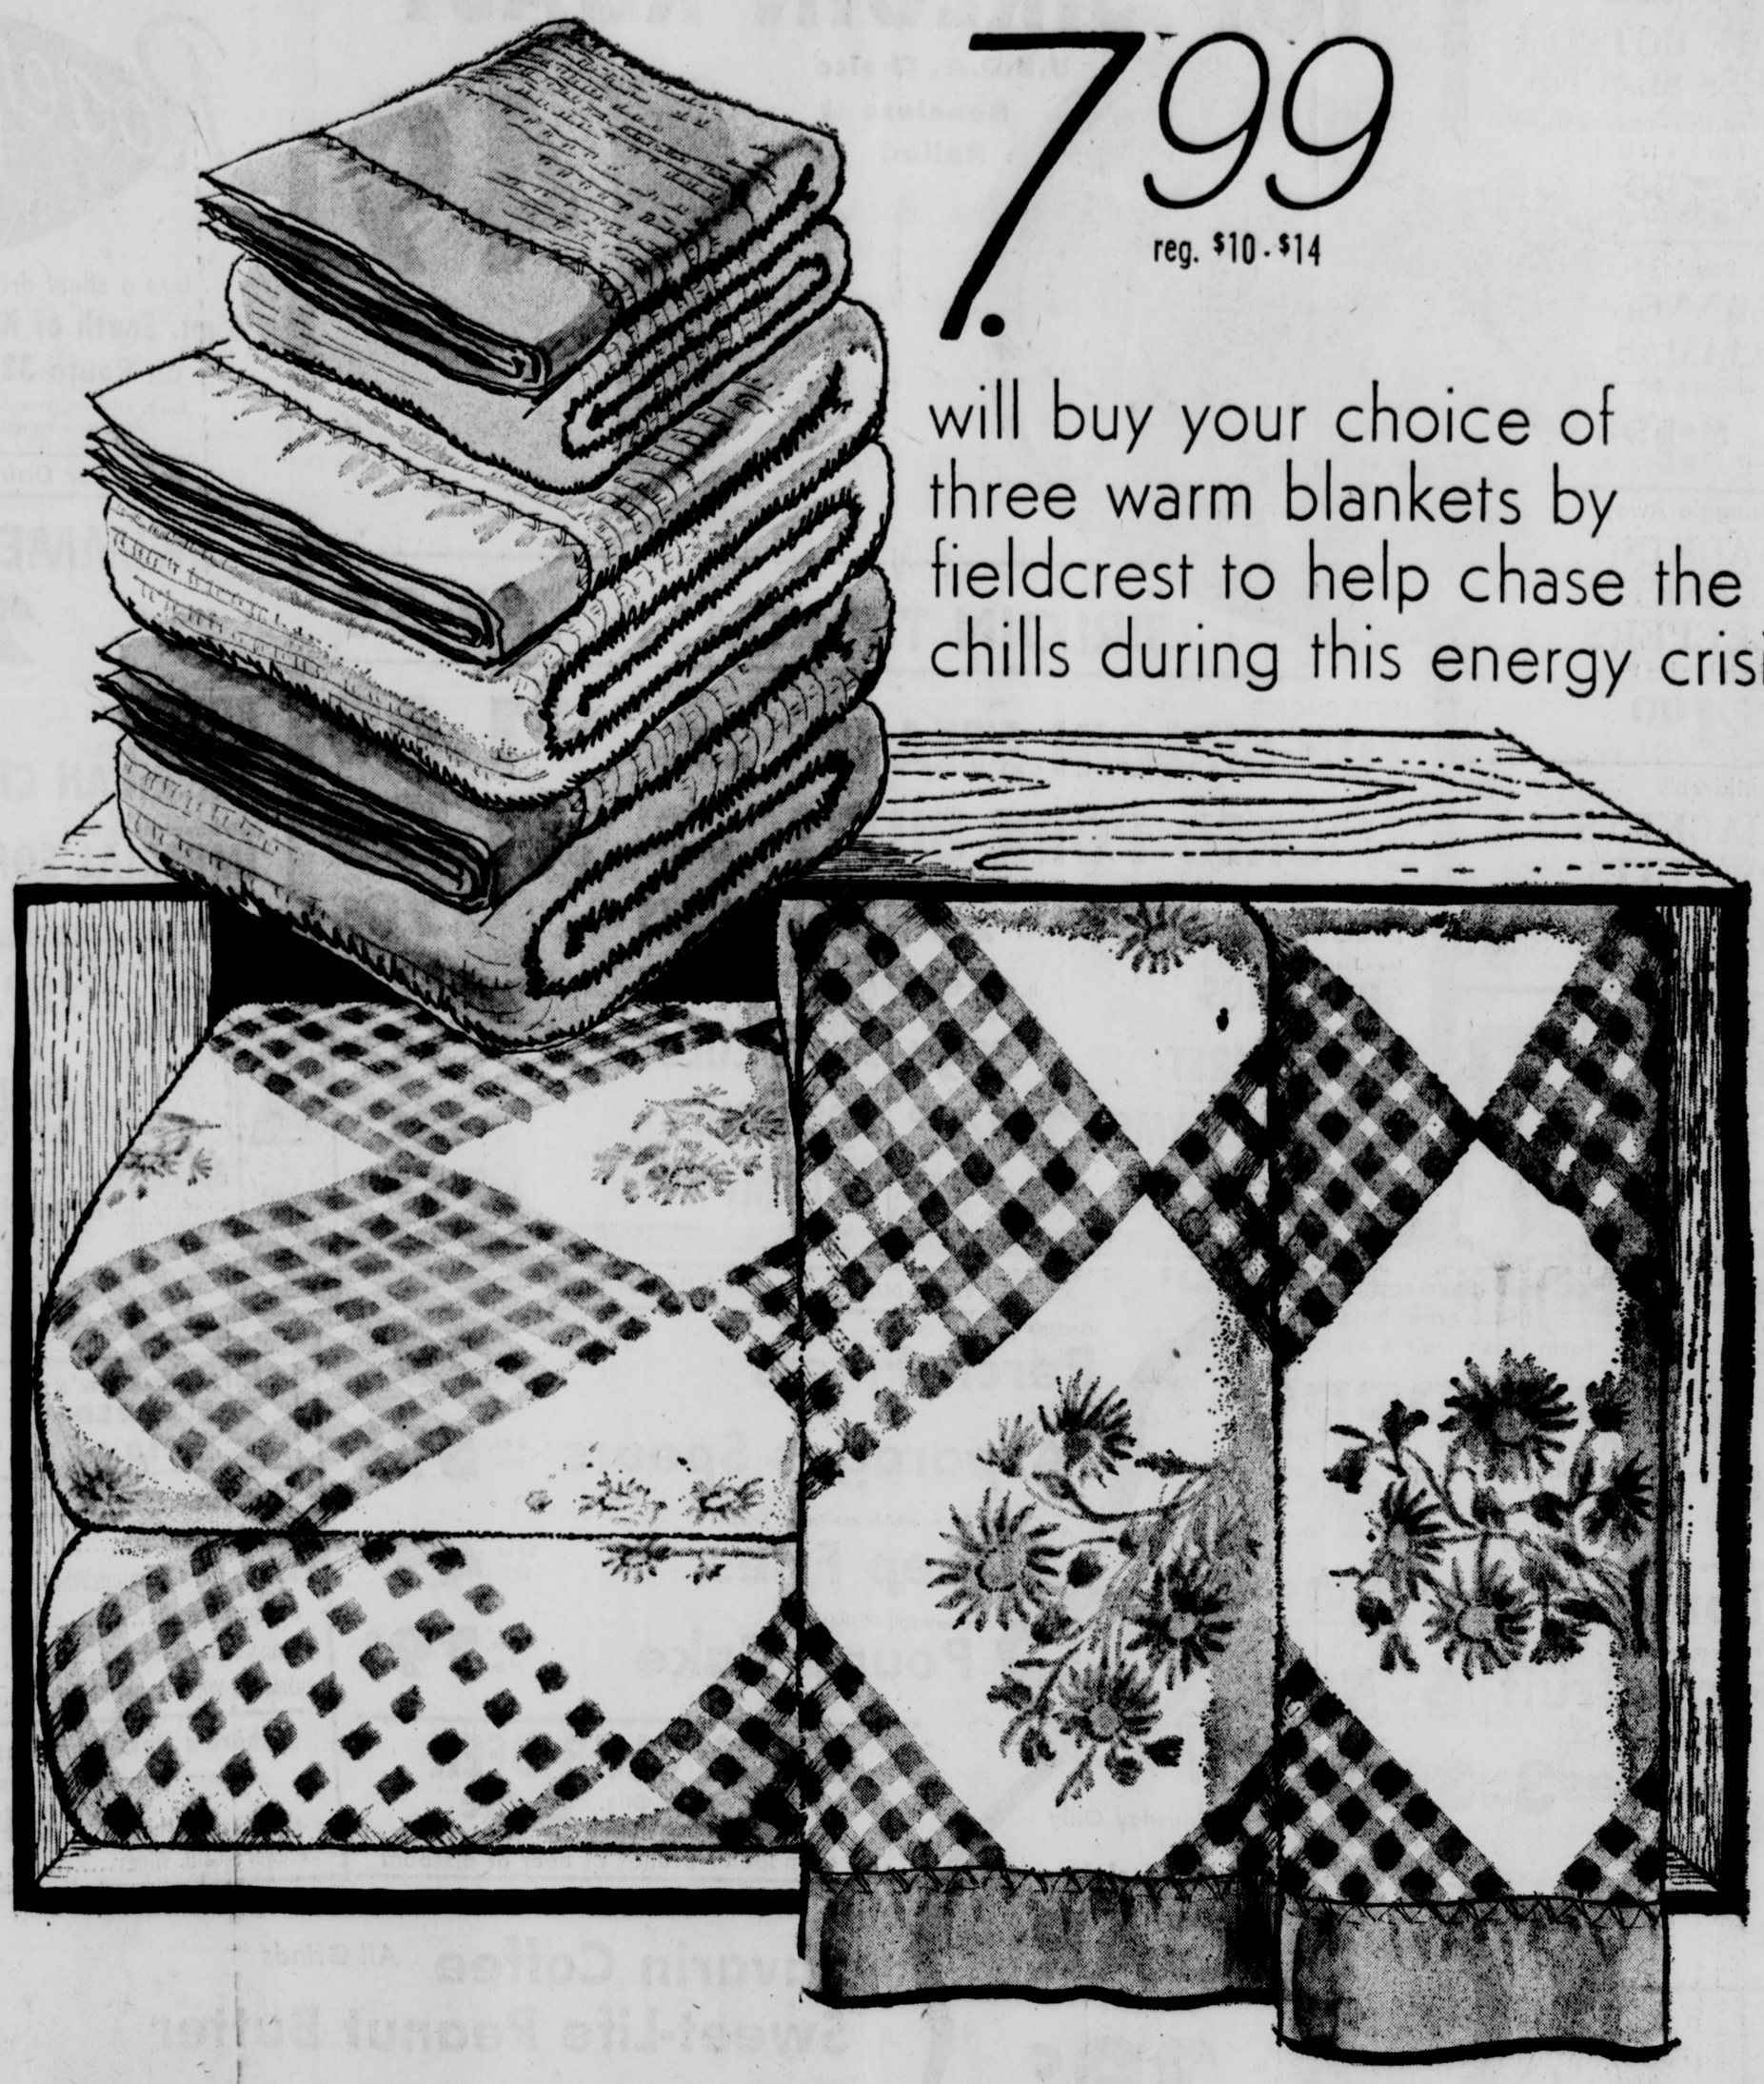

Another group has registered for crafts courses under qualified instructors who will be teaching such Early American crafts as quilting, rug hooking, woodworking (aimed at producing the basic tools and utensils for the museum), painting on glass and fabric, yarn dyeing, flower growing (in a garden tract on the Senate House grounds) and flower arranging (both fresh and dried).

One course which has attracted much interest is centered on the teaching by area professional musicians of original folk songs and hymns peculiar to Ulster County, along with the authentic dances of Colonial times. All students who have registered for training as walking tour or museum guides will spend time in this course. Additionally, 16 youthful couples at the 10th grade level will be rille dancing and other authen- organized and trained in quadtic Revolutionary Era dances.

Special training will be given, too, to a group of boys who will make up an Honor Guard and who will be dressed in authentic Revolutionary costumes modelled on the early Ulster County Regimental uniforms.

Other youngsters will be taking the museum workshops, in which they will be actually working on the renovation of the museum building itself — painting, redecorating, setting up and cataloging exhibits.

Classes which begin this week will continue for six weeks, meeting regularly on the Senate House grounds in either the two museum buildings, the barn, or the second floor of the former funeral home on the grounds. Youngsters who have not signed up in the first group of 305 students, but would like to register now for a future series of courses, should contact The Stockade Committee, Uptown Post Office Box 1776, Kingston.

Financial and Commercial

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, taking a pause after Tuesday's late rally.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down a fraction, but gainers moved out to almost a 2-1 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Gold Price Resumes Rise

LONDON (UPI) — The price of gold resumed its upward surge on the big London bullion market today, opening at $177.50 an ounce.

Gold first broke through the $175 barrier Tuesday in an unchecked splurge of speculation, rising to past $180 before moving lower as speculators engaged in profit taking.

The metal dropped by $6 an ounce in Zurich, however, where it also reached a record level Tuesday.

The U.S. dollar fell slightly in most markets.

The opening Frankfurt rate was 2.659 marks to the dollar, down from 2.6685 marks Tuesday. The dollar dropped slightly to 2.7813 guilders in Amsterdam and 646.50 lire in Milan, and in Brussels it fell back to 40.60 Belgian francs on the free market.

Zurich boosted the dollar's value, by contrast, to 3.0985 Swiss francs. But the dollar slipped to 286 yen in Tokyo and fell back sharply in Paris to 4.805 francs on both the financial and commercial sides of the market.

The pound was slightly stronger, buying $2.3137.

Heavy buying pressure was reported building across the continent with one dealer predicting the level of gold could go to $200 an ounce or more.

"Anything could happen now," a London dealer said Tuesday after gold broke through the $175 mark in London, Paris, Zurich and Frankfurt.

A month ago, dealers described $175 as the ultimate limit in gold prices and most said the level would never be reached. At the time, the metal was trading at what they called an unrealistically high range of $140 an ounce.

Silver, copper and lead prices, swept up in the speculation, also rose to highs across Europe. The U.S. dollar declined.

Higher Costs Predicted For Typical Grocery Basket

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of a typical household grocery basket, which set a new record in January, will push on to more new peaks this spring and summer, government economists predict.

The January market basket estimate was calculated by Agriculture Department experts Tuesday while bakers descended on the Capitol to publicize their claim that consumers could run out of bread temporarily this spring unless the government slows down wheat exports.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz heatedly denied the bakers' charges.

According to agriculture experts, the annual-rate cost of a market basket of farm-produced food for a "household" of 3.2 persons rose 1.8 per cent from $1,650 in December to a record $1,680 in January because of sharp increases in farm prices.

One department economist said consumers should be bracing themselves for still higher prices in the months ahead because "prices of practically all major categories of food will be increasing, reflecting tightening supplies, higher farm prices, and rising costs of processing, transporting and distributing food products."

For the months from January through March, retail food prices are expected to average 5 per cent above the last three months of 1973. Agriculture experts say they believe most of this year's price hikes will be packed into the first six months, with a levelling off possible in the summer and some downturn late in the year if crop and livestock production rises as expected.

Even with the predicted production gains, however, department economists have predicted that average retail food prices for all of 1974 will average between 8 and 16 per cent above 1973, probably 12 per cent above.

Man Named To Board

RHINEBECK — James Hawco of 69 Montgomery Street has been appointed to the Rhinebeck Planning Board.

Hawco fills the vacancy created by the resignation of board member Earl Howells. Hawco's appointment was announced by Town of Rhinebeck Supervisor William Allen.

Hawco, a sales representative for a local food supply firm, is vice-chairman of the Town of Rhinebeck Democratic Committee.

Storm King Construction

CORNWALL, N.Y. (AP) — Construction of the controversial Storm King Mountain pump storage plant could begin within a month, a Consolidated Edison official said Tuesday.

An agreement between Con Ed officials and the Orange County Building and Trades Council was reached Tuesday, Carroll Dunn, vice president for Consolidated Edison construction, said.

The project was expected to employ an average of 800 men over the four to five years required to complete the project, Dunn said. He said the work force would peak at about 1,500.

Environmental groups have opposed the project, claiming, among other things, it would result in large numbers of striped bass being killed.

"We expect that things are going to start and keep right on going until it's done," Ronald G. Hughes, president of the labor group, said.

The facility will draw water from the Hudson River to a reservoir west of Storm King Mountain and let it back down to generate power during peak consumption periods, a company spokesman said.

Marlboro Hose Bill Passes State Assembly

MARLBORO — Legislation providing for the incorporation of the Marlboro Hose Co. 1, Volunteer Firemen's Benevolent Association as a not-for-profit corporation has passed the Assembly where it was introduced by Assemblyman Emeel S. Betros (R-99th Dist.)

The measure would allow the corporation to collect taxes on premiums from out of state insurance companies for insurance written against loss or damage by fire covering property situated in the Marlborough Fire District in the Ulster County Town of Marlborough or within any territory where the fire district is obligated to render protection.

In addition, Assemblyman Betros said, the corporation would be required to provide relief, aid and assistance to its members and their families who are disabled or indigent and also promote the welfare of the volunteer fire service within the district.

The measure is sponsored in the Senate by Senator Richard E. Schermerhorn (R-40th Dist.)

Ulster Vols Discuss Parade

TOWN OF ULSTER — The Ulster County Volunteer Fireman's Association held its February meeting recently at the Ulster Hose Co. No. 5 headquarters on Ulster Avenue Mall.

Dominick Constantino, president of the organization reported that 26 fire companies and 20 drum and bugle corps have registered for the annual Fireman's Parade and Convention, which will be held this year in Highland on July 25, 26 and 27. The Highland Hose Co. will be this year's host. The lineup of participating units ,said Costantino, includes four fire companies from Dutchess County.

Ulster County Fire Coordinator Duncan Wilson reported that there were 2,550 total calls in the county during January, including 137 first alarms, 36 mutual aid calls and 56 volunteer ambulance calls.

Three new members were admitted to the association at the February meeting: Don Brott of Ulster Hose No. 5, and Gary Haefeli and Stephen Karaffa, both of the Spring Lake Fire Department in the Town of Ulster.

'Dino' Pleads Not Guilty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dean Martin Jr., 22-year-old son of the entertainer, pleaded not guilty Monday to charges of illegal possession of firearms and transferring of firearms.

Known as "Dino," young Martin was ordered to appear for trial April 23. He was arrested Jan. 16 by Treasury Department agents who said he had in his possession eight machine guns and an antitank gun.

Martin was also accused of illegally transferring two of the weapons to a federal agent.

Charles Weedman, his attorney, said at the time of his arrest that Martin collected guns as a hobby and was selling his home and part of his collection.

Dino, married to actress Olivia Hussey, lives in his own home in Beverly Hills. He is a pre-med student at UCLA.

Junior League Book on Old Buildings Nears Finish

MRS. OTHMAN ABU-GHEIDA, left, president of Junior League of Kingston, is shown here discussing the final manuscript for the organization's book project. Others participating in the project include (L-R) Mrs. Avery Leete Smith, chairman; Mrs. John Cross; Mrs. Robert Diamond and Mrs. Kirken V. Kirk. (Freeman photo by Kruh)

Proof reading of the manuscript for the book "Early Architecture in Ulster County" is in its final stages. This is a culmination of a project undertaken by the Junior League of Kingston, N.Y. Inc. which began in 1965 involving the recording of data of more than 1750 buildings in Ulster County built prior to 1850.

Upon completion of the survey in 1968, Barry Benepe, an architect from the New York City firm of Hancock, Little, Calvert, Inc. was hired to select the most noteworthy buildings for possible inclusion in a publication. On the basis of this study, a grant was received from the New York State Council on the Arts to prepare a manuscript which included data from the Junior League survey, plus additional structures built shortly after 1850 as well as some local history.

The manuscript, edited by Mr. Benepe, has just been completed and will be published by Peachtree Press, under the auspices of the Junior League of Kingston, N.Y., Inc. The project has always been envisioned as a community service and any profits will be set aside for a second printing, with those profits earmarked for a community project.

'Historic Kingston' Topic at Women's Club Meeting

E. Robert Johnson, president of Friends of Historic Kingston, and long active in state and local research and history interests, was guest speaker at the February meeting of the Women's Club of the Kingston YWCA.

Using as his theme "Sights and Sounds of Historic Kingston", Johnson gave selected highlights in Kingston and Ulster area history in its three centuries of growth and change from 1652 to the present. Johnson was introduced by Mrs. Henry Millonig.

Sights and sounds illustrated the first settlement of the area by Captain Thomas Chambers and his followers in the mid-seventeenth century; the two Esopus Indian wars; the building of the Stockade of Wiltwyck; the English Capture of the Colony; and the area's development toward the Revolution.

Johnson recalled the crackling of flames with the British burning of Kingston; the Kingston and Ulster Revolutionary War activities were pointed out, and the famous though short era as Capital of the fledgling New York State had added significance as the Bicentennial trend grows. Sights and Sounds summarized the area industries from grain and milling to shipping, manufacturing and electronics, and the physical, cultural, economic and historic - architectural development of the Kingston and Ulster area were drawn into the narrative. Johnson noted that the Kingston area has a wealth of original diverse architectural elements, historic structures and sites, cultural and economic attributes all of which are vital to the total value and importance of Kingston and its area.

Johnson has been long active in local and state historical interests and research. An authority on the colonial Manor of Foxhall and its colonial and Revolutionary ties. Johnson also has worked in mercantile history work and genealogical projects. He is a member of the Northeast Conference of Archeological Historians. Johnson is executive director of the Catskill Region TB and Respiratory Disease Association serving the Ulster, Greene and Sullivan area; is a member of the Health Sciences Advisory Council of Ulster County Community College; and has been active in several state lung health organizations.

How can these apples, picked last fall, taste so good today?
The secret is Crisp-aire®
Thanks to the miracle of "Controlled Atmosphere" refrigerated storage, which we call Crisp-aire®, apples that were picked last fall stay fresh and crisp all winter.
These are just a few of the popular varieties harvested in New York orchards. We call this McIntosh Country because more Macs grow here than anywhere else in the world. But remember, every apple grows best in McIntosh Country, so pick the variety that's best for you...for cooking or eating fresh. Just be sure you buy Crisp-aire apples from McIntosh Country.
McIntosh
A favorite snack apple. Distinctive, slightly tart flavor, crisp and very juicy.
Cortland
Best for salads—stays whiter longer when sliced or diced. Also a fine eating apple and a quick-cooking and baking apple.
Red Delicious
A favorite eating apple. Sweeter, juicier and more flavorful; crisp and delicious, too.
Golden Delicious
Perfect for eating out of hand and for pies that are dreamy to look at and delectable to eat.
Rome Beauty
Best for baked apples—holds its shape and texture. Good for all cooking uses and a fine eating apple.

FREEMAN ADS BRING FAST RESULTS

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS ...it tells you how

Maple syrup time is fast approaching once again and, as I've mentioned before in this column, you don't even need to tap sugar maples to harvest some of this delicacy. Any variety of maple will do and prospectors out in the western reaches of Canada even make a lip-smacking sweetening by boiling down the sap of birch trees.

The diagram here shows you how to inexpensively tap a tree or two with spiles made from a cut-off bean shooter or a four-inch length of green elderberry stem with the pith pushed out. Pick trees at least 10 inches in diameter, collect each day's flow in the late afternoon and figure on a total of 15 to 30 gallons of sap—which will boil down to one-half to one gallon of syrup—per tree.

And here's extra good news for this fuel-short year! One of MOTHER's readers, George R. Lightsey, has found that he can—to a large extent—let Jack Frost concentrate the sap collected by the Lightsey family.

"Put the raw juice into empty milk cartons," says George, "and place the containers outside at night. Bring the frozen blocks into the house the next morning and, after about one-third of each chunk has melted, drain off the liquid and throw the ice away. Refreeze the concentrated sap the next night ... and the following morning allow about half the ice to melt before you save the liquid and discard the solid remainder. It will then take relatively little boiling to condense the fluid you have left into golden, delicious syrup."

For more specific information on backyard maple sugaring, including further details about the Lightsey "freeze concentrate" method of condensing sap, send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS, in care of this paper. Ask for Reprint No. 173, MAPLE SYRUP!

Ham Operator Corrects Abby's Wrong Signal

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote that she heard strange voices coming from her turned-off radio and traced it to her neighbor—a ham radio operator. Your reply was an insult to more than 285,000 radio amateurs in the U.S.A.

She should first contact the ham, and if he is indeed a licensed ham operator, he has had to pass strict examinations which require him to know enough to keep a good, non-interfering signal on the air. If he's at fault, he would appreciate being told, so he can promptly remedy the situation.

There are thousands of nonlicensed law-breakers operating radios on another service who often cause interference, for which we hams are blamed. Our record for self-policing and helping in emergencies is too often overshadowed by annoying interference from someone who is not a licensed ham.

Any questions you or your readers have about amateur radio can be answered by writing to The American Radio Relay League, 255 Main St., Newington, Conn. 06111.

WA4BDW IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR "WA": Sorry my advice about hams wasn't kosher. I appreciate your setting me straight.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a godchild we've seen only twice in our lives. She's 22 now and sent us an invitation to her wedding. We would have gone even tho it would have meant traveling to another state and spending a night in a motel, but the date of her wedding conflicted with the opening of hunting season. My husband loves to hunt, and I've never planned anything that would keep him from his hunting.

I wrote her a nice letter, explaining why we couldn't attend her wedding. A few days later we received this one from her:

"Dear godparents: I received your letter today, and I am disappointed and insulted. My fiance is also a hunter, and so are many of his friends, but they all seem able to make it to our wedding. Hunting season comes every year, but I get married only once, therefore I feel that your excuse is very flimsy and downright disgusting. And please don't send me a gift as it won't be appreciated.

YOUR GODDAUGHTER"

Abby, we were shocked! I wanted to reply, but my husband said: "Ignore it." He was also glad we declined now that he found out what kind of a person she is.

How would you have handled this?

SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: When declining the invitation, I'd have omitted the reason. But since you didn't, and she took offense, I'd have ignored her rude letter and saved the price of a wedding gift.

Post: Doing the Right Thing

By ELIZABETH L. POST
© 1974, Emily Post Institute, Inc.
Distributed by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

The following letter has been chosen as the prize-winning one for this week. A copy of Emily Post's Etiquette has been sent to the writer, who asked that her name be withheld.

Dear Mrs. Post: For some time I have been bothered by a question which occurs when I shop in the dress departments of certain fine stores. The staff of saleswomen remains somewhat the same, and their faces become familiar over a period of time.

Is it incorrect not to choose or ask for the same salesperson each time? I sometimes feel that by making a random choice I may be insulting those whom I have consulted in the past, and am thereby not getting the same quality of service which I would get if I sought the same one each time.

I would be interested to learn the point of view of the sales people on this question.

Mrs. M. K.

Dear Mrs. K.: It is beneficial to both customer and salesperson when the former asks specifically for someone who has rendered good service. The salesman or saleswoman is helped because the number of sales shown on his record is increased, and in many cases because of the share or commission he receives. The customer is helped because any good salesperson will give special service to someone who adds to his sales as a regular customer.

These are the "commercial" benefits. There are others, equally, or more, important. Everyone likes to be appreciated and when a customer shows his satisfaction by requesting a certain salesman, that selesman cannot help but feel appreciated. He will make an extra effort, to please, and that, in turn, will make the customer happy.

So, there's nothing to lose! Do ask a salesperson who has pleased you for his card, and remember to ask for him by name when you return to the store. He'll like it, his manager will like it, and you will like the results, too.

• • •

"Courtesy is — to do and say, the kindest thing in the kindest way."

"Courtesy is — good nature, regulated by good sense."

Courtesy is — like an air cushion — there may be nothing in it, but it eases our jolts wonderfully."

Do you have any ideas for finishing the phrase "Courtesy is . . . ?" Whether you do or not, send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope and you will receive a "Courtesy is . . ." button. Just write "Courtesy" on the outside of the envelope. If you wish, enclose your own definition of courtesy, too, and the best ones received will be published in future columns.

Remember, Courtesy is contagious. Let's start an epidemic!

Be a Hostess with Surprises . . . Let Guests in on the Cooking Act

A world of fun! At least that's what the Japanese say about tempuras, with all the guests in on the cooking act. A tempura is a combination of foods that are batter-coated and fried in deep hot fat. In this appetizer tempura, there is an assortment of fruits, and you've never tasted anything so luscious.

The Emperor's Tempura

Batter:

One cup Aunt Jemima Pancake Mix.

One tablespoon sugar.

One-fourth teaspoon ground ginger.

Two-thirds cup water.

One egg, beaten.

Three medium-sized apples.

Four medium-sized bananas.

One 20-oz. can pineapple chunks in syrup.

Sauce:

One and one-half teaspoons cornstarch.

One tablespoon butter or margarine, melted.

One-eighth teaspoon ground ginger.

One-half cup Aunt Jemima Syrup.

One-half cup reserved pineapple syrup.

For batter, combine pancake mix, sugar and ginger. Add water and egg. Beat with rotary beater for two minutes. Let stand five minutes.

Core and cut each apple in eight wedges. Cut each banana into one-fourth-inch thick slices. Thoroughly drain pineapple; reserve one-half cup syrup for sauce. Dip fruit peices into batter, then fry immediately in moderately hot deep fat (375 degrees F.) one to one and one-half minutes or until golden brown. Serve immediately with warm sauce.

For sauce, stir cornstarch into butter. Add ginger. Gradually stir syrups into mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens slightly. Makes eight servings.

Kingston Hospital Auxiliary Plans Annual Coffeebreak Day

The Board of Trustees of the Auxiliary of Kingston Hospital met Thursday, Feb. 21 at the Nurses Residence of the hospital. Mrs. Norman Schwakopf, president, announced that Mrs. Wilbur Peters will be chairman of the Annual Coffeebreak Day. The event, which will be held Friday, Mar. 29, will have a new concept this year and promises to be a pleasant surprise for the entire community.

Reports were given of several Auxiliary-sponsored services: the snack bar, hospitality cart, baby photo service. Miss Marguerite Meyers announced that a new class for candystripers had been started February 9. Twelve girls are enrolled. Teenage girls interested in becoming candystripers are invited to contact Mrs. Karl Pitcock, director of volunteers.

Mrs. Christus J. Larios, chairman of "Oriental Sunset", the gala dance which was sponsored by the Auxiliary on Feb. 2, gave a final report on the event She expressed her gratitude to the Daily Freeman and the local radio stations for their excellent publicity which helped make the benefit an overwhelming success. She thanked those who worked on the various committees and expressed her appreciation for the support from the entire community.

Attending the meeting were the Mmes: Charles Boice, Harold Finkle, Gerald McCabe, William Darling, Wilbur Peters, Ted Corea, Jerry Kurtz, Karl Pitcock, John McCullough, Seymour Semilof, Louis Salzmann, LeRoy Stoothoff, George Rifenbary, Christus Larios, and Frederic Holcomb Jr., and Miss Marguerite Meyers.

The next regular meeting of the Auxiliary Board will be held on Thursday, March 21.

Helpful Hints From Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Through the years many people have come up with ideas for softening hardened brown sugar: grating it, putting it in a bread box, freezing it and then, of course, the double-boiler method plus many more. I believe I have an unusual way.

In the past I would invariably store my brown sugar in too dry a place, and when it came time to measure out "one cup of firmly packed brown sugar," I spent half my time pounding out the lumps. I finally decided enough of that and came up with this easy solution:

Instead of adding water directly, which is often too much, I dump my solid brick of brown sugar into the basket of my bun warmer, in the bottom of which I place a few drops of water.

I then insert the basket with the sugar into the warmer, cover it, and place it on the stove to heat.

The steam moistened the sugar; the lump broke up easily and was its original moist consistency, easily measurable.

I saved the money which I would have spend buying another box of sugar, and these days of skyrocketing prices, "a penny saved is really a penny earned!"

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Folks:

My special mailman just "dripped" in with the mail and said:

"I know how to plan your menu if it's raining a lot! Serve frog legs, they will be plentiful and cheaper!"

Heloise

P.S.—I almost "croaked" on that one!

• • •

Dear Heloise:

I know that most mothers with babies use extra diapers at night.

Here is the method I've used with all four of my children to eliminate extra bulk between their legs:

Take the extra diaper (I use the cloth pre-folds) and fold it in half lengthwise, then fold it in half again. Place this "pad" in the center of the other diaper and pin it on the baby as usual.

I've even done this for toddlers using two diapers plus the pad, and their legs were never spread too far apart.

This method works equally well with the disposable types, especially the nice ones with pleats. Just peel off the plastic backing and leave the pleats in place instead of fanning them out and you have the same result.

Wish I'd known these things the first time around, but somehow that first precious bundle manages to survive in spite of us.

Margaret Schroeder

• • •

Dear Heloise:

Here is an idea I use for a change from fresh eggs. I buy the new frozen egg substitute manufactured to avoid cholesterol. This includes only the white of the egg, but with seasonings to make it taste good, and extra vitamins too.

It's advertised for scrambled eggs, but I like to pour it out from the package in dollar-sized "pancakes" and cover with good maple syrup. Makes the easiest pancakes you'll ever find, and they're tasty and good for you.

Concert Scheduled Friday

The Bennett College choir and the freshman Glee Club of Amherst College will present their annual joint concert Friday, March 1 at 8 p.m. in Grace Episcopal Church, Millbrook.

They will be accompanied by members of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic, who are participating through the CAMP program of the New York Council on the Arts.

A Bennett senior, Vida Dubinsky of West Hartford, Ct., will be soprano soloist performing two pieces—Kliene Orgel—Messe by Haydn, and Magnificat by Tergolesi.

Miss Dubinsky will be joined by Rayah Salenius mezzo soprano, in the second piece. Miss Salenius is a Bennett freshman from Hong Kong. William McCorkle will be organist.

Also on the program are several selections by the Bennett Swans, the select singing group, which has just returned from a concert tour of Europe over winter term.

Bruce McInnis will direct the Amherst Glee Club, and Prof. Timothy Vernon of the Bennett College Performing Arts Department will direct the Bennett Choir.

Admission is free.

Youth Hopefuls Named

STONE RIDGE

Candidates for the two parties in Ulster County Legislature's Youth-in-Government program were named recently at the Y-I-G Nominating Convention held at Ulster County Community College.

Mrs. Patricia V. Majewski of J. Watson Bailey Junior High, Kingston, who is this year's YIG coordinator announced the candidates from the five schools participating. The schools include MJM, Miller and J. Watson Bailey, all junior highs in Kingston; Onteora, Marlboro, New Paltz and Rondout Valley Central High Schools.

The elections will be held in all schools Feb. 28 and March 1. In addition to the candidates listed, four county legislators will be chosen from each school and five will be chosen at-large for a total of 33.

The winning candidates will be the guests of the Ulster County Legislature at the Thursday, March 14 session.

The Freedom Party named the following slate:

For congressman, Tim Dunham, Onteora; senator, Derek Wilson, Onteora; assemblyman, Gary Kogut, Marlboro; county judge, Wayne Jones, Onteora; Family Court judge, Anney Herring, Marlboro; surrogate judge, Stacey Smedes, Bailey; district attorney, Thomas Petro, Bailey; sheriff, Kirk Barnes, Bailey; coroner, Andy Kovacs, Miller School; county clerk, Lolly Liverance, Miller; county treasurer, Jenny Ford, Marlboro.

Students for Democratic Action named the following slate:

For congressman, Eric Kates, Rondout; senator, David Lavoie, Rondout; assemblyman, Eric Bernstein, Rondout; county judge, Robb Issen, New Paltz; Family Court judge, Peter Bort, New Paltz; surrogate, Nancy Griggs, MJM; district attorney, Diana Rupp, Onteora; sheriff, Roy Brooks, Marlboro; coroner, Maggie Yerry, Onteora; county clerk, Paul Beretta, Marlboro, and for treasurer, Harold Issen, New Paltz.

Conduct County Survey

KINGSTON

Ulster County Temporary Manpower Council is currently conducting a manpower survey as the first step in determining the manpower training needs for Ulster County thus enabling the county to receive funding under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973, CETA.

All businesses within the county will be contacted as will all governmental agencies and school districts.

The survey, which is being coordinated by Robert C. Randall, Manpower Administrator, has thus far shown that the current energy crisis is having its adverse effects on local businesses. Many employers contacted have painted a very dim picture of employment prospects and have suggested that things will probably worsen before realizing an upturn.

Legislature Chairman Peter Savago also announced that the county is in receipt of a $15,000 Operational Planning Grant from the U.S. Department of Labor which enables the county to conduct the survey to facilitate the preparation of a comprehensive Manpower Plan. Two persons have been hired and are presently working — Glenn Decker of New Paltz and Lester Hatcher of the Town of Ulster.

Savago explained that the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973 will decategorize and decentralize all manpower programs and place the responsibility for the design, administration and delivery of manpower systems on local government units with populations of over 100,000. Previously, all manpower programs were designed and administered by the federal government through local contractors, such as community agencies, YMCAs, cities and the like.

It is anticipated that Ulster County will receive in excess of $500,000 under the act.

The Ulster County Manpower Office is located at the County Building, Flatbush Annex, East Chester Street by-pass and Flatbush Avenue, Kingston.

CITY OF KINGSTON, N. Y., WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 27, 1974 SEVENTEEN

UBA Wants Independent Mall Study

By HUGH REYNOLDS

KINGSTON — The Uptown Businessmen's Association is expected to ask for an independent in-depth feasibility study of the proposed North Front Street Shopping Mall after failing to arrive at any kind of a decision with the information now available.

"It isn't that we question the veracity of the developers," one businessman who asked not to be identified, told the Freeman. "There's some good information there; some valuable information. But, it's prejudiced which is the way it should be. After all, this guy is making a sales pitch. We'd like an independent look at it."

Other sources indicate the businessmen have had difficulty rounding up information; it is far flung and sometimes not even available. For instance, the businessmen learned through a Freeman article involving sales tax paid in the city.

The fact that some $75 million worth of business was done in the city looms large when one considers the developers of the mall are proposing to do about $25 million a year. "I don't see how we can expect anyone to come in and do a third of the retail business without taking something away from what's here already. The question is how much," said another source.

The businessmen are by no means opposed per se to the proposal to build a $20 million shopping plaza on North Front Street from the parking garage to Converse Street. If anything, they are neutral, wary of commiting themselves to an irrevocable position without a complete airing of the facts. And they're not alone.

"We still have some questions of our own," said James G. Connors, executive director of the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency. However, the mood at the agency leans toward "go."

"The agency feels that based on the information that we have right now that it would be good for the city," Connors said.

But Connors isn't diving in, either. "They (the developers) say there's a market. If there's a market then they can get tenants and if they can get tenants they can get financing. If it turned out they couldn't get tenants, that wouldn't be good. If it turned out they couldn't get building materials, that wouldn't be good. There are still unknown factors."

Connors says, and the businessmen would probably agree with this, that the primary question is:

"Is it good for the city? Is it good for the private sector, the public sector, for the people?"

City officials will have to answer that question and if the answer is "yes" the city, as Connors sees it, will have to "participate in the parking end of it."

Although Connors apparently feels he has enough information on hand or coming — "we expect some more detailed reports on their finances in mid-March" — he doesn't rule out a feasibility study or something akin to it.

"We're trying to get additional information," he said. "If we can get the answers to some of these questions (questions raised by the businessmen) we may not need a feasibility study.

"I wouldn't rule out getting all the information that everybody thinks is necessary in order to make a decision," he concluded.

Lines for Gasoline Shorter in Dutchess

By JON POWERS

RED HOOK — The first day of the new even-odd gasoline sales plan for New York State might have been a rousing success in Northern Dutchess County, except for one important point: most of the stations in the Red Hook and Rhinebeck area were closed Tuesday.

For the most part, the few stations that did have the gas to pump Tuesday displayed visibly shorter waiting lines. Station owners and customers alike seemed satisfied with the new system.

At only one site did the waiting line seem as long as it's always been. With some 20 cars waiting for gas, an employe at the Mobile station in Red Hook said, "An hour ago, the place was empty, they all showed up at the same time."

The gasoline drought certainly isn't new to Northern Dutchess County, especially during the final week of the month. The area, however, has felt the gas pinch more than nearby Poughkeepsie and Kingston. Infrequent deliveries and the transient traffic on Routes 9 and 9G have left precious little fuel for the Northern Dutchess motorist, many of whom commute daily to Poughkeepsie or Kingston.

It is the general feeling, however, that the even-odd system might help conserve — or at least stretch — the supplies that do reach the area. As Walter Schubert of Hyde Park explained, "After this fillup, I can't get gas until Thursday. I'm going to be watching my miles on Wednesday."

But the opinions differed. "It's kind of unfair," said John Neese of Barrytown, "I was planning to go to Jersey on Wednesday. But I can't get gas so I can't make the trip. I'd really be ticked off if that trip was urgent."

"I like the idea," said another man, apparently just passing through the area, "At least it cuts down on the waiting. This is a crisis. If a guy drives so much that he has to get gas every day, then he's not doing his part."

There's one other catch to the even-odd system: it's illegal to buy gas if you've already got half a tank or more. None of the station owners appeared to even check. And one motorist, when asked that indelicate question by a reporter, said, "Mind your own business" and rolled up the window.

'Give Plan More Time'

WASHINGTON (AP) —Federal Energy Chief William Simon has urged officials from New York's Lower Hudson Valley area to give the federal gasoline allocation plan "time to prove itself."

U.S. Rep. Benjamin Gilman, who represents part of Ulster County, and A. N. Romm, editor of the Middletown Times Herald Record, presented Simon with a petition Tuesday signed by about 32,000 residents requesting more gasoline for the southern New York area.

"Until the program proves itself, give us the time to equalize these percentages and the intrastate distribution," Simon told Gilman.

Simon noted that the federal distribution plan was only three weeks old and said state officials had a good deal of authority in distributing the supplies.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Smallwood formally presented the petition to Simon.

Ash Wednesday Observance

The Rev. Robert B. Loftus, pastor of St. John's Parish, West Hurley and episcopal vicar of Ulster County, administers ashes at the start of the solemn Lenten season. Ash Wednesday observances in area churches today mark the beginning of the 40-day period of penance leading up to the joyous celebration of Easter on the Christian religious calendar. CAKE CUTTING TIPS FOR THE BRIDE — Victoria St. John, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. St. John of Kingston, who will become the bride of Kenneth Gilligan this summer, receives cake-cutting tips from Barbara Matthews (L) and Carol Crewes (R) of The Bride's Wish, Inc., wedding cosultants, during the recent Bridal Bazaar at Burgevin, Inc. The bazaar was organized by Mrs. Burton Davis of Burgevin's who invited all future brides in the area to visit the shop, view the various displays and talk with representatives of local businesses which supply all types of bridal services. Participating in the Bridal Bazaar in addition to Burgevin's and The Bride's Wish were the Governor Clinton Hotel, the Hedges, Holiday Inn, Fitzgerald Studio, Photo Workshop, Tom Reynolds Studio, Ketterer's Bakery, Spiesman's Specialty Bakeries, Inc., The Kitchen of Millie-Ann, Card 'N Party and The Fifth Avenue Card Shop. Area Business News

Walgreen Rx Book

CHICAGO, Ill. "How to Save Money on Prescriptions" is the subject of a free pamphlet which is now available at the prescription counter of every Walgreen Drug Store across the nation.

Walgreen President Charles R. Walgreen III, R.Ph., announced that the pamphlet is being distributed as part of the firm's recently-instituted consumer information program.

"This booklet," said Walgreen, "is not an advertisement. It sets forth what we feel are effective steps that anyone can take to reduce their prescription expenses."

Among the steps Walgreen stressed are the following:

First, find out exactly what your prescription is: drug, brand, strength, and quantity.

Then use your telephone. Call several pharmacies to see if they will quote prescription prices over the phone. Then ask their price on your prescription.

Finally, compare prices, and take your prescription where the price is the lowest.

A WINNER — John Oberlander (R) receives gift certificate from John Konz, Sears superintendent and president of the Kingston Plaza Merchants Association, as first prize winner in a poster contest sponsored by the Kingston Area Library. Judging the entries were (rear) James Kaman and Mrs. Karen Aspromonte. This and other prize-winning posters are being displayed at the Kingston Plaza branch of Bankers Trust. Bank Holdup Forum At Ulster Savings

KINGSTON Ulster Savings Bank, 280 Wall Street, recently sponsored a forum on proper employe procedures in case of a bank holdup.

The forum was led by Jack Lupton of the Kingston office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Donald Graham of the Dutchess County office of the FBI.

In addition to all the employes of Ulster Savings Bank, Heritage and Rondout Savings Bank employes were invited.

Colleen R. Crespino, senior vice president of Ulster Savings said: "In light of of recent holdup attempts in the Hudson Valley, we must keep our employes prepared to handle such situations to maintain maximum safety and security."

More than 80 savings bank employes attended the forum held Jan. 29 at the Holiday Inn in Kingston.

John Hancock Ins. Heavy NY Investor

BOSTON, Mass. More than $940.4 million has been invested in the New York economy, the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. said today in its year-end report.

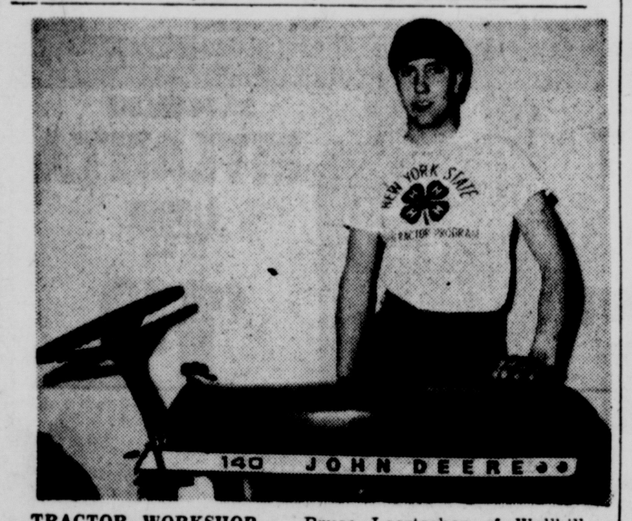

Payments of benefits to New York policyholders and beneficiaries in 1973 totaled $164.1 million. During the same period, residents purchased $1.2 billion of new life insurance, bringing to $9.6 billion the total of John Hancock insurance in force in the state.

The life insurance company reported mortgage and real estate loans and commitments of $460.4 million in New York as of December 31.

It also listed sizable investments in the number of companies with operations in New York, including $66.8 million in International Business Machines Corp.; $20 million in Eastman Kodak Co.; $11.7 million in Alexander's Department Stores of Brooklyn, Inc.; $7.4 million in Xerox Corp; and $6.9 million in Bulova Watch Co., Inc.

The John Hancock investment portfolio includes significant holdings in major utilities serving the residents of New York. Among these are $40.1 million in Consolidated Edison Co. and $11.3 million in the New York Telephone Co.

Benefits paid to policyholders and their beneficiaries totaled more than $1.2 billion, with $879 million to living policyholders. Included was a record $208 million in dividends.

TRACTOR WORKSHOP — Bruce Loertscher of Wallkill, the New York State 4-H Tractor Operator's Champion, will conduct a workshop on the maintenance, safety and operation of garden tractors and lawn mowers at Buster Dunn's Sales and Service, Route 28, Kingston, starting March 6, from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The workshop will be open to youth from 10 to 15 years of age and their parents.

TAKES BIRD AND CAKE — Pot Luck, a big six quart, slow or fast, all-purpose cooker takes the bird, the cake, the roast, the meat loaf and just about everything else. It's a great new gift idea introduced by the Nesco Division of the Hoover Company. There are many great features of this new item. When the meal is over, the food can be left in the removable porclain cookwell with the lid on and stored in the refrigerator. And the chef can cook and serve with Pot Luck right on the table. Pot Luck bears the mark of Underwriters' Laboratories. See your favorite Hoover appliance dealer for more data about this fine item for the homemaker.

THE CHAMP — Kyle Rote Sr. shows his son's Superstars medal Tuesday after Kyle Jr. won the competition among professional athletes. Kyle Sr. was a football star with the New York Giants in the 1950's. Rote Jr. plays soccer for the Dallas Tornados. (UPI)

Will Success Spoil Superstar Rote?

By WILL GRIMSLEY

ROTONDA, Fla. (AP) — Will $53,400 spoil Kyle Rote Jr.?

"I'm the same jerk I've always been," the 23-year-old wonder kid reassured his friends and legion of new admirers after winning the $123,400 Superstars finals Tuesday.

The two-day victory over some of the world's most talented and celebrated athletes in a sort of sports mini-decathlon suddenly has projected the youthful Texan from the virtual obscurity of a $17,400-a-season soccer player to national prominence as "the most super of the superstars."

Agents will be dogging his doorstep. He will become the target of operators and manipulators. He will be besieged with offers for public appearances and television commercials.

"I don't intend to get set up with a popcorn popper," Kyle said firmly. He said it seemingly without malice but certainly with disdain for a new life of raking in the money for money's sake.

A ministerial student who owns one car and two bicycles and who lives in a one-bedroom rented apartment in Dallas with his blonde wife, Mary Lynne, Rote emphasized that there will be no change in his living style.

Kyle, whose father was a football star at Southern Methodist University and then with the New York Giants, made a runaway of the second annual Superstars spectacle by scoring 37 points on the opening day, then holding off the strong challenge of defender Bob Seagren, the pole vaulter, and Dick Anderson, star safety of Miami's Super Bowl champion Dolphins.

When the scores were totaled for the two exhausting days of competition in 10 sports, of which each competitor could choose seven, Rote had a total of 44 points. Seagren followed with 38 and Anderson was third with 37. Points were awarded on a 10-7-4-2-1 scale for the five top finishers.

Rote won $25,000 for placing first and collected $13,200 in bonus money — $300 for each point. The $15,200 he won in the qualifying trials boosted his over-all take to $53,400.

Seagren wound up with $26,400 counting $15,000 for second place, and Anderson with $10,000 third money and a total of $21,100, exclusive of preliminary earnings.

O. J. Simpson, the ball-carrying star of the Buffalo Bills, and tennis ace Stan Smith tied for fourth with 24 points, and the other seven finalists tapered off from there down to Austrian skier Karl Schranz, last with four points.

Rote, clean-cut, baby-faced an implausible looking superstar at 6-feet, 185 pounds, won the tennis, swimming and bowling, and finished second in the golf and one-mile bicycle race.

Rote said he appreciated the big payday but it wasn't the most important feature. "The challenge was the thing," he said.

He added: "We'll pay a few bills, stash some away, share with those in need and try to be good stewards with the rest. I'd like to be a Christian witness. This gives me an automatic 'in' with the kids."

Twins Will Deal Arbitration Winners

To the Victor Goes a Trade

By the Associated Press

Arbitrators, phooey! When it comes to the Minnesota Twins, team President Calvin Griffith is judge, jury and executioner rolled into one.

Right now, Griffith is preparing to play hangman and lower the trading boom on pitcher Dick Woodson, infielder Steve Braun and outfielder Larry Hisle.

The three players recently utilized newly available arbitration provisions and won salary squabbles with Griffith. That cost him a pretty penny and some even prettier dollars and where Calvin is concerned, losing money is the root of all evil.

"I'm mad because I've lost three arbitration hearings," Griffith fumed. "It cost me about $15,000. But I'll find some way to get it back by trading them."

Woodson was the first major leaguer to win an arbitration hearing when his $28,500 request was approved over Griffith's $22,500 offer. The 29-year old right-hander, 10-8 with arm trouble last season, already has asked to be traded. Hisle hit .272 and Braun .283.

Elsewhere on the arbitration front, two members of the New York Yankees won their cases (utilityman Bill Sudakis, pitcher Wayne Granger) and two lost (shortstop Gene Michael, utilityman Duke Sims). That may prove a point for those who claim the Yanks are no better than a .500 club.

The best news for the New Yorkers, however, came when pitcher Mel Stottlemyre signed for a reported $87,500.

The National League gave a little ground in its opposition to the designated hitter rule and said its teams could use a DH in road exhibition games against American League clubs.

Sports

However, NL President Chub Feeney said neither club could use a DH if the National League team does not agree to it.

Spring training is the time of year when optimism runs rampant and this year is no exception.

General Manager Spec Richardson of the Houston Astros said oft-injured pitcher Larry Dierker is "in the best shape he's ever been in at the start of camp."

Skipper Sparky Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds said he feels that this year "more than ever" his pitchers reported in good shape.

And Manager Ken Aspromonte of the Cleveland Indians raved about pitchers Brent Strom, Mike Kekich and Cecil Upshaw, who posted a combined 6-19 record a year ago.

"They all looked great," Aspromonte said. "Things are looking better and better. I have to hold back my enthusiasm. It's too early to get excited, but it would be very easy to do so."

Besides Stottlemyre, contract signees included Chicago White Sox catchers Ed Herrmann and Pete Varney, Kansas City catcher Fran Healy, Chicago Cub infielder Vic Harris, Cleveland outfielder Rusty Torres, Pittsburgh infielder Kurt Bevacqua, Baltimore pitcher Wayne Garland, Cincinnati pitcher Pat Zachry, Philadelphia outfielder Jerry Martin and Minnesota infielder Craig Kusick.

Fritz Peterson Looks Ahead

By Milton Richman
UPI Sports Editor

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — For those of you who sometimes wonder what ever became of Fritz Peterson, this is to let you know he made it — but not by much.

"I'm happy," he says. "Whatever has happend before is over and done with. Past history, as far as I'm concerned."

Fritz Peterson is coming off his first losing season in six years, and a $9,000 pay cut, but he appears exactly the way he says he feels —happy.

He looks 100 per cent different than he did last spring.

A year ago, he and fellow Yankee lefthander Mike Kekich figured in what probably was the most unique swap in all baseball history when they traded wives. Many wondered whether the two pitchers could possibly cope with all the public censure, the jockeying from the dugouts, which was bound to follow.

Strangely, there never was that much public censure and whatever jokes there were, never came from the bench.

Now it's one year later.

Mike Kekich is with Cleveland.

Fritz Peterson is divorced from his wife, Marilyn, and expects to marry Susan Kekich shortly, as soon as her divorce is finalized.

These developments plus the fact that his won-lost record nose-dived to 8-15 last year following a 17-15 log the season before, did not cause Peterson to dig a hole for himself some place and hide.

He went out and spoke at more than a dozen Little League banquets instead. He wanted to find out what the kids' reaction to him would be and he did.

"They were tremendous," says the Yankees' 32-year-old lefty. "What they wanted to talk with me about was baseball and that really showed me 'it' was over with. I think I did 15 banquets and in all those, only one kid made a remark. He said something like 'how's your wife?' I said, next question."

As for what happened to him on the field last year, Fritz Peterson says he lost his concentration, especially after mid-season, but he refuses to blame that on his ordeal off the field.

"The only one I blame is myself," he says. "I'd get behind toward the end of the year, and I'd lose interest in the games. That was wrong because I was only hurting myself.

"What I was doing was looking for things to go wrong, and sure enough they would. When you look for things to go wrong, you'll find them somewhere. My overall outlook last year was poor."

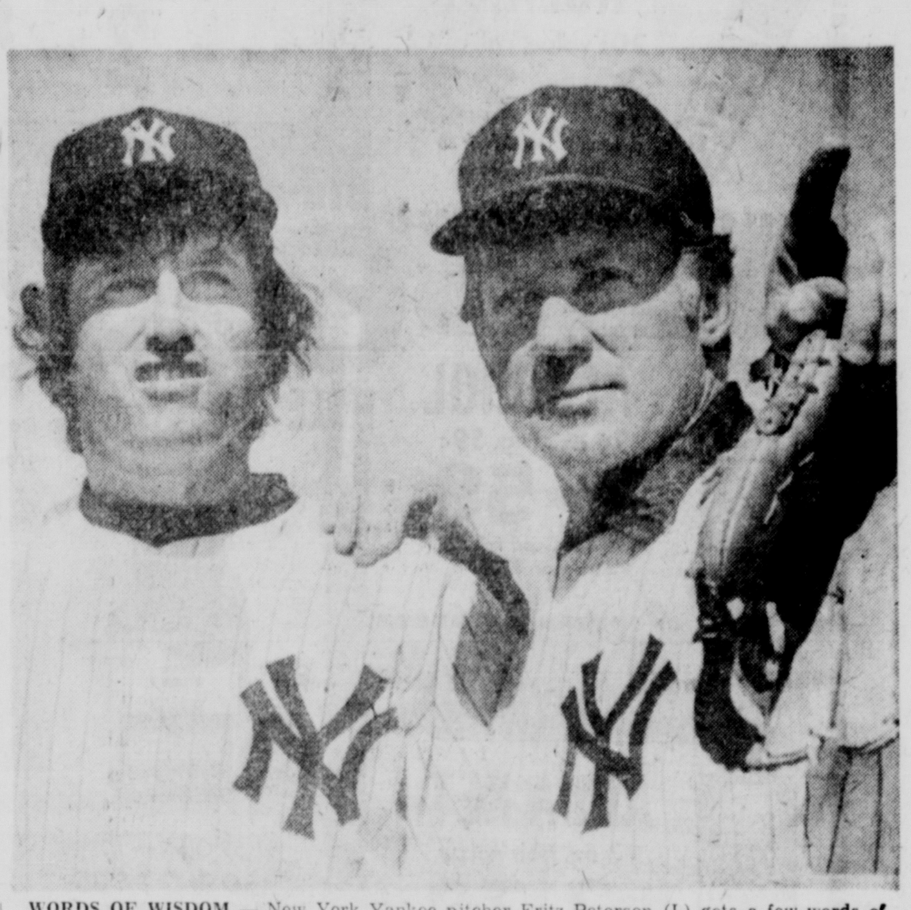

A torn muscle in Peterson's right thigh didn't help matters. Unable to follow through properly, he discarded his regular pitches, the ones which helped him win 20 games only three years before, and experimented with others. He became a defensive pitcher and his earned run average jumped the same way the mercury does anytime someone puts a match under the thermometer.

"Now I'm starting out with a brand new slate," says Peterson, pumping fast balls at catcher Thurman Munson on the sidelines while Whitey Ford, the Yankees' pitching coach, looks on.

"No more experimenting. I'm going over this whole thing with Whitey and try to get four basic pitches ready — my fast ball, slider, palm ball and what I call 'the thing.' It's not a knuckle-curve or a knuckleball. It's something like Burt Hooton (of the Cubs) throws, but I'm older than he is, so I threw it first."

Fritz Peterson's features broke into a smile.

He's happy, all right, and he shows it.

Injury Leaves Braves Limping

By United Press International

The search for the all mighty extra dollar in this era of extreme inflation could hurt the Buffalo Braves' playoff cause.

This situation was magnified in Tuesday night's 119-112 loss to Los Angeles after the Braves squandered an 11-point lead in the final period.

Jim McMillian contributed only four points to the Buffalo effort. A healthier McMillian may have provided enough firepower to blunt a Laker comeback, but the Braves forward was not up to the occasion after suffering leg and body bruises in a SuperStar competition in Florida earlier this week.

Advocates of higher salaries for pro athletes could well argue that if McMillian was receiving enough money promoters would not have been able to entice him into that competition.

McMillian was hurt when he fell during a cycling race. The Braves would rather have had him backpedaling on defense in basketball action than leaning over a set of handlebars of a two-wheeler.

Los Angeles needed the victory to remain 1½ games behind Golden State in the Pacific Division of the National Basketball Association after the Warriors beat Phoenix, 120-100.

Pat Riley's 15-point fourth quarter helped offset Bob McAdoo's 44-point game for Buffalo. McAdoo, who also collected 24 rebounds, became the first player to score 2,000 points in the NBA this season. Gail Goodrich led Los Angeles with 25 points and Riley had 21 as the Lakers erased Buffalo's 94-83 lead with 8:26 left in the game.

In other NBA action, Boston edged Detroit, 86-83; New York routed Capital, 85-71; Houston ripped Kansas City-Omaha, 118-101, and Philadelphia whipped Portland, 118-110.

In the ABA, San Diego defeated Virginia, 126-119, and Indiana stopped Utah, 110-94.

Warriors 120, Suns 100

Rick Barry was the complete player as he scored 32 points, was high with 14 rebounds and had eight assists for Golden State. The victory was the third straight and 16th in the last 22 games for the Warriors. Clem Haskins was high for Phoenix with 31 points.

Celtics 86, Pistons 83

Boston built a 13-point lead in the fourth quarter, but still needed Jo Jo White's free throw with six seconds left to assure a Celtics' win over Detroit. John Havlicek scored a game-high 26 points for Boston. Dave Bing paced the Pistons with 22.

Knicks 85, Bullets 71

New York held the opposition to a season low as Walt Frazier led the Knicks with 21 points and Earl Monroe netted 19. Dave DeBusschere, recovering from a bruised heel, tallied 16 and collected 15 rebounds. Kevin Porter was high for Capital with 17 points.

Wolfpack Clinches ACC Title

By United Press International

Tommy Burleson had himself a ball.

Burleson, the 7-foot-4 center for top ranked North Carolina State, scored 22 points and pulled down 11 of his team's 38 rebounds Tuesday night to lead the Wolfpack past arch-rival North Carolina 83-72.

The victory, a record 29th in a row in conference play for State, enabled the Wolfpack to clinch the Atlantic Coast regular season title and with it a first round bye in next week's post-season tourney that will determine the ACCs' representative in the NCAA tournament. The win also upped N.C. State's overall record for the season to 23-1 with the lone loss coming at the hands of third rankd UCLA in December.

"I just gave the game ball to Burleson," said coach Norm Sloan after his team's triumph over the Tar Heels. "I've never done that before in my entire coaching career. He was truly the best big man out there tonight. Sure we have David (Thompson) and Monte (Towe) but without the big man it would be awfully tough."

"This is the greatest State team I've ever seen," commented North Carolina coach Dean Smith whose fourth ranked Tar Heels lost for only the fourth time in 24 games this season with three of the setbacks supplied by the Wolfpack. "They pressed us real well on defense throughout the game."

"North Carolina was highly motivated and the first half was unbelievably tough, but our boys hung in there and played a great second half," added Sloan whose team finishes its regular season Saturday against Wake Forest.

Burleson tallied 19 of his points in the second half when N.C. State rallied from a 34-32 intermission deficit. Thompson finished with 21 points and Rivers had 19 for the Wolfpack while Walter Davis paced the Tar Heels with 18.

NFL Players Prepare to Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost two-thirds of the members of the National Football League Players Association have voted to authorize a strike against the league if necessary, an association official said Tuesday night.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the association, said that ballots had been mailed three weeks ago to the group's 1,220 members, nearly all the players in the league.

Two thirds of the ballots have been returned so far, Garvey said, and "they are virtually unanimous to authorize a strike if necessary."

The ballots did not set a strike deadline, nor did they advise the membership of what the association would consider a strike situation. Garvey declined to discuss the association's negotiating goals.

But Buffalo Bills' running back O.J. Simpson, who is not a member of the association, said Monday night the players' greatest objections are to a rule requiring compensation for the victimized club when an athlete plays out his option and signs with another team. The rule was instituted by Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Pioneers Blast Kingston in Finale

By STEVE KANE

POUGHKEEPSIE — When you've been blown off a basketball court by 39 points, you tend to become very quiet. That's why the loudest noise in the Kingston High dressing room here Tueday night was the sound of Cory Chambers peeling the tape off his leg.

Poughkeepsie's Pioneers, the undefeated champions of the DCSL, had just completed the regular season with a 98-59 pounding of the Maroons. And it was as bad as it sunds.

It's hard to single out what the biggest difference between the teams on the court was. Certainly shooting was a factor. The Pioneers threw up quite an assortment at the basket, and most of them went in. With a deceptive height advantage, Poughkeepsie used it to dominate the boards. That was also telling.

Poughkeepsie also played aggressively on defense, seldom leaving KHS with an uncontested shot. But whether it was as effective as it seemed, or it was just the Maroons' sluggishness with the ball it's hard to say.

The second battle going on during the game was the race for the league's scoring title. In that derby, Raymond Gay, the Kingston guard who had led the way most of the season, was displaced by both his rivals from Poughkeepsie.

By the Freeman's unofficial count, Larry Bennerman, who had 25 in his last home appearance finished with 323 points to win the crown. His backcourt mate Billy Daniels pumped in 26 and wound up second with 319 for the season. Gay, held to nine points here, ended in third position with 315.

With the game no longer in doubt in the second half, perhaps that was the spark that drove Poughkeepsie to bloodletting. The Pioneers kept their bothersome press working right into the last quarter while Daniels and Bennerman shot it out between them.

Like his team, Kingston coach Mike Rienzo was quiet in the aftermath. "I'll say this though," he said. "I thought Beacon was better (than Poughkeepsie), but I've changed my mind. This team shoots better. They're tough."

Poughkeepsie shot well from the outset with Lloyd Lyons doing most of the early damage. Kingston was lucky to escape the first quarter trailing by only six.

Bill Chaffin, with half the KHS points, hit a couple long ones to keep the Maroons alive. Gay and Kim Anderson put together a five point burst at the start of the second period to bring Kingston within one. But it ended right there. The Pioneers picked up a couple of Kingston turnovers and run off eight straight.

Chaffin, with 12 points, was the only Maroon to get into double figures. Besides the two prolific guards, Poughkeepsie boasted 19 from the unstopable Lyons, 15 points worth of tap-ins from center Mike Patterson, and nine more from Ed Johnson.

Poughkeepsie finished 16-0 in the league and 17-1 overall. The lone loss was to Beacon in a Christmas tournament. The Pioneers will go into the sectionals seeded first in Class A.

Kingston also faces the sectionals next. The Maroons, who ended the year 8-8 and tied for third in the DCSL, and 8-10 overall, face Mamaroneck Saturday in the first round of Class AA.

Another 17-1 team wrapped up its season here Tuesday — Kingston's JV. The little Maroons rolled over Poughkeepsie, 67-36. Larry Carpenter scored 15, Dickie Burris had 14, and Greg Brown had eight rebounds. The KHS season included a sweep of all DCSL opponents and a split with non-league foe Newburgh.

Highland Rally Overcomes OCS, 69-49

BOICEVILLE — Things never did work out the way Onteora High School basketball coach Ron Pape wanted them to this season. It was a trying year for OCS followers and it ended Tuesday night much like it started as Highland pulled away from the Indians in the fourth quarter to hand them a 69-49 defeat.

Elswhere on the Ulster County Athletic League's final regular season night, Rondout nailed down third place in Division I by dumping Pine Bush, 78-56. Fallsburgh completed an unbeaten season by thrashing New Paltz, 95-38, and Liberty turned back Ellenville, 89-68.

Onteora won only three times this season and its final game was a microcosm of the entire year.

"We kept making simple mistakes" moaned Pape. "We hung in there for three periods and then we'd not box out right or get called for travelling. Things like that."

Highland and Onteora played an even first quarter, but the Big Blue, third best team in Division II, gradually pulled away to lead by 12 after three periods. In the fourth quarter the Indians rallied to come within seven.

"Then we had two travellings and missed a couple of rebounds we should of had and that was it," said Pape.

The Onteora coach did praise the play of a couple of his youngsters. John Carlson and Bob Woerthman, and made note of the strong season turned in by graduating senior Tim Malloy, who scored 23 points in his final game.

Dave Mackey led Highland with 14 points. J.C. Gersh added 13.

Rondout raced to a 20-11 first quarter lead and never was headed as it defeated Pine Bush to clinch third place in its division. The Ganders got 19 points from Joe McCall and 18 from Cory Schoonmaker. Brian Fitzpatrick scored 13 in defeat.

New Paltz was the 16th victim of Fallsburgh's power and Hugie Coach Frank Davis was duly impressed.

"They have some ballclub," he said, a touch of envy evident in his voice.

The Comets, who have a date Friday with Marlboro at Pine Bush to decide the league championship, tuned up by blowing the last place home team away in each quarter.

Sam Copeland's 28 points led the way for Fallsburgh. Lorenzo Simmons topped New Paltz with 12.

Liberty was granted 44 free throw attempts and made 33, or 27 more than Ellenville made, to beat the Ellies by 21 points.

"It was a physical game," understated Liberty Coach Floyd Emery. Action got so hot and heavy that Emery was hit with one technical foul and Ellenville mentor Vic D'Alessio was ejected for his protests.

At any rate, Liberty, which had three fewer field goals than Ellenville, wound up winning in a breeze.

Reggie Biddings scored 23 points and Andre Bridges added 21 for Liberty. Ray Younger was Ellenville's high man with 24 points.

Slalom Wins For Cochrans

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Cochran, 21, and his sister Barbara, 22, of Richmond, Vt., placed first in their respective events Tuesday in the final slalom competition of the 1974 Can-Am Series.

In the men's slalom competition, Cochran recorded a 1:35.27 time. Cary Adgate, 20, of Boyne, Mich., followed with a 1:37 clocking and Geoff Bruce, 20, finished third in 1:37:02.

The final giant slalom competition in the series will be held Wednesday.

Miss Cochran won the two-run women's slalom in 1:00.07. Abby Fisher, 17, of Conway, N.H., was second down the Whiteface Mountain course in 1:02.35 followed by Sandy Pulsen, 21, of Olympic Valley, Calif., with a 1:02.38 clocking.

Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., was fourth followed by Susie Patterson of Sun Valley, Idaho.

The overall womnes' two-run slalom title was won by Leith Lende, of Castleton-on-Hudson. She fell on her second run Tuesday and failed to place.

The men's competition was down a 60-gate course; the women's through 50 and 59-gate courses respectively.

Region XV Tourney Thursday

Chestnut on Second Team

STONE RIDGE

Ike Chestnut, Ulster County Community College's most consistent scorer during the 1973-74 basketball season, has been named to the Region XV 2nd All- Star team announced today.

Simultaneously, Robert K. Lake, regional director, and Raoul Nacinovich, regional basketball chairman, announced the seedings and pairings for first-round play in the Region XV Tournament, starting Thursday at New York City Community.

Host New York Community has been top-seeded. Following in order are: 2. Westchester; 3. Manhattan; 4. Post Junior; 5. Farmingdale; 6. Nassau; 7. Suffolk; 8. Staten Island.

Westchester and Suffolk kick off the tournament Thursday at 1:30 p.m. Manhattan and Nassau are scheduled at 3:30 p.m.; Post-Farmingdale at 7 p.m.; and Staten Island vs. New York, 9 p.m.

IKE CHESTNUT

The semi-finals are scheduled Friday at 7 and 9 p.m., with the finals Saturday at 9 p.m. The All-Star contest precedes the championship event at 7 p.m.

Mike Hay of Sullivan County, a 1972-73 NJCAA All-America selection, heads the Region XV first all-star team. His teammates are: Nestor Serrano, New York City; Clarence Shine, Manhattan Community; Arnold Stone, Nassau; Peter Eason, Post Junior. Five different schools are represented on the squad.

The second and third teams:

(Second Team)

Ike Chestnut, Ulster; Allen Thompson, Westchester; Ron Williams, Greater Hartford; Robert Taylor, Farmingdale; Mike Barnes, Farmingdale.

(Third Team)

Keith Hudson, Staten Island; Gary Clark, Hostos Community College; Lincoln Sessons, Westchester; Otis Fenn, New York City; Warren Carr, Fashion Institute.

OCS Awaits Word on Lundar

BOICEVILLE

Onteora High's ski squad was awaiting word from New York Intersectional officials on the fate of Tomaz Lundar with respect to this weekend's Intersectional competition at Belleayre Ski Center.

Lundar, who has won 8 of 11 individual races this season, failed to make the top ten in overall standings at Monday's Section Nine meet at Great Gorge when he fell at the start of the giant slalom. He had won the slalom event in a close race with Chris Dill of Fallsburg, who emerged as the Overall Champion.

Dill placed second in both slaloms and had lowest combined time of 77.738 seconds to edge Brad Davenport of Rondout Valley. Davenport placed third in the slalom behind Lundar and Dill and fifth in the giant slalom.

With Lundar's disqualification in the giant slalom, Fallsburgh's Comets easily repeated as team champions with combined time of 332.880. Onteora was runnerup with 338.718. Suffern third and Rondout fourth at 348.350.

"Lundar lost his one ski coming off the top of the course," explained Onteora coach Joel Thomson. "It was the first time anything like that ever happened to him."

"We are hoping that if we agree to foot the bill for Lundar, we may get a favorable ruling permitting him to compete," said Thomson. "His record has been outstanding and that may be a factor in his favor."

Top 10 overall finishers qualified automatically for the State Intersectionals. Cross Country is slated Thursday, with the slaloms Friday and Saturday at Belleayre.

Bar in 2nd Place

KINGSTON

The Handlebar used only five players in its YMCA "A" League basketball game with Artie's Bar. They all scored in double figures to win 94-72 and move the Barmen (5-1) into second place, a game behind the league leading Acker's Bar (6-0) in the National Division.

In an inter-division contest, Ramsey's Chargers routed Bud's Subs of the American Division 94-72 to hand the Subs their sixth straight loss.

Did Coleman High Victory Prove a Point?

LAYUP — Sawyer Chris Luley (41) lays one off the glass during Tuesday night's game against Coleman. A. J. Maneen (32) defends for the Satesmen. Coleman won, 68-59. (Freeman photo by Haines)

By IRA FUSFELD

KINGSTON

Can your average Ulster County Athletic League basketball team beat your everyday Dutchess County Scholastic League team?

It can and it did here Tuesday night when Coleman High outplayed visiting Saugerties, 68-59, in the season's finale for both clubs.

Here you had two clubs with identical records in their respective leagues. Coleman had lost twice each to the Fallsburghs, Ellenvilles, and Libertys of this world, and Saugerties had taken a couple on the chin each from the Poughkeepsies, Beacons, and Kingstons.

Each team won five games, each lost 11. It was as good an inter-league matchup as you'll find this year. And Coleman, of the lowly-regarded UCAL (lowly-regarded by most when compared to the DCSL), managed to successfully carry the banner for its league.

Saugerties Coach Larry Marcus, for one, wasn't surprised.

"I think the UCAL's a good league," the affable Sawyer mentor observed afterwards. "There's not much difference between the two leagues right now except for the top clubs. I think, for instance, that Poughkeepsie (DCSL) is better than Fallsburgh (UCAL)."

Marcus has been on record in the past as having been one of those who might like to see Saugerties in the UCAL. Reportedly, there had been formal investigations of such a move, but odds are the Sawyers will be back in the DCSL next year, perhaps playing in a more realistic (for them) realigned division.

Certainly Coleman showed Saugerties fans that they play a pretty good brand of ball in the UCAL. The Statesmen pressed Saugerties into 31 turnovers, shot close to 50 per cent for the first three quarters, and, despite falling short in the reboudning column, raced to a commanding lead which the Sawyers couldn't completely reverse.

"I didn't like our movement on offense," Marcus said, "and I didn't think we did well on defense either.

"But Coleman played a good game," he added. "They were quicker than us."

Coleman managed to go out with a bang because senior captain John Carr ended his career with a strong 18-point effort, junior A. J. Maneen played tough underneath, big Dick Terlingen gave the Statesmen a decent reserve job and point man Phil Timbrouck scored 14 points and moved the club well.

There had been 10 lead changes and three ties during the first quarter and a half before Coleman took over for good. Scoring ten of the half's final 13 points, Coleman moved from 24-23 behind to a 33-27 intermission advantage.

During that first half the shooting of senior Larry Panella, who wound up with a game-high 26 points and was easily the best Sawyer on the floor, and center Arnie Hackett had kept Saugerties in there. At the same time, Hackett and Chris Luley were dominating the backboards.

Coleman, meanwhile, was getting on-target shooting from Kevin Coughlin (he had nine of his 15 points in the first quarter), and was keeping up with Saugerties' end-to-end charges.

It was in the third quarter that Coleman won the game. Playing a nearly flawless eight minutes, the Statesmen outscored Saugerties, 23-14, with Timbrouck putting in eight points to spark the drive.

By midway through that period Panella was on the bench with four fouls, Luley was proving to be ineffective, and Hackett was sitting it out as well.

The Sawyers trailed by 15 going into the final period and while they picked up a bit as Coleman cooled off, the deficit was too much to erase. The closest Saugerties came was seven, 64-57, but by that time there were too few seconds left on the clock.

"What can I say," Coleman coach Bill DuBois cried. "They just couldn't miss tonight."

DuBois said Coleman's lackluster final period, in which the Statesmen could have applied the crusher and instead had to hang on to win, was as a result of carelessness.

"We had the momentum going," he said, "and they would just race upcourt and shoot. They weren't thinking. Finally I was able to get them to slow it down."

DuBois came away impressed with Panella of Saugerties.

"I'll tell you something. That kid is one of the finest shooters I've seen."

With Coleman winning the JV game, 46-43, and the packed house enjoying the school's annual Parents' Night, it was a happy evening for Statesmen fans. Pete Gallagher had 21 points and Jim Sottile 10 for the JV winners, who won 15 of 17 this season.

Saugerties, which finished 1-16, got 16 points from Steve Martin and 13 from Tim Cole.

Illinois Bowler Converts 7-10 Split

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Vern "Bud" Messer of Plano, Ill., Tuesday provided the excitement of the 71st annual American Bowling Congress Tournament.

Messer, who owns an eight-lane bowling center, beat the odds—which ABC officials said were 180,000-to-1—by picking up the 7-10 split. It was the first "bed post" conversion in the first 11 days of the tourney's 79-day run.

Messer was rolling in doubles and his ball struck the No. 7 pin full and the pin bounced off the ball in the pit and back to the lane and rolled into the No. 10 pin.

Leaders in the major categories remained unchanged during the early rolling Tuesday. Ted Bakatselos of Detroit remained the regular singles leader with a 688 total he bowled Monday.

Leader in the doubles for the fifth day were Tom Slane and Garry Johnston of Gary, Ind., with 1309. All-events frontrunner was Bill Hohensee of Albany, N.Y., with a 2058 series. Teak leader remained Superior Carpet Service of Topeka, Kan., with a 3098 pinfall.

Islanders In Real Yawner

By United Press International

While most of the teams in the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association were making life dreary for the goaltenders Tuesday night, the Vancouver Canucks and New York Islanders, each hoping to avoid the NHL East cellar, put on a figure skating exhibition.

After exchanging goals in the first period, the Canucks and Islanders went round and round the ice for 43 minutes without hitting the nets. Of course, there are two ways to look at a game like that, as Islander coach Al Arbour noted.

"In one sense it was a yawner but in another sense it was a tight, close-checking hockey game with disciplined play by both teams."

Vancouver coach Phil Maloney agreed the game between the two clubs was "not exciting" but added, "the one thing I liked about it, the club did as I asked and played a disciplined style game. The Islanders under Al Arbour have become a disciplined, well-coached team and I've tried to do the same thing in Vancouver. This is the first time since Dec. 9 we had a chance to get out of the cellar."

With the 1-1 tie on Dennis Kearns' power play goal for Vancouver and Denis Potvin's score for New York, both teams picked up a point and the Islanders retained their one-point edge on the Canucks.

The game ended with the frustrated crowd of 11,121 at New York's Nassau Coliseum booing the lack of scoring.

In other NHL action, Montreal beat Atlanta 6-5 and Detroit ripped Toronto 7-3.

In the WHA, Houston clipped Vancouver 3-2, Quebec bombed Winnipeg 7-1 and Chicago beat Los Angeles 4-2.

Canadiens 6, Flames 5

Claude Larose, who had only three goals all season going into the game, scored a three-goal hat trick to lead Montreal past Atlanta. Larose, used sparingly most of the season after breaking his leg last year, tallied an unassisted goal to start the scoring in the first period. After Pete Mahovlich put the Canadiens ahead 5-4 with his 28th goal of the season at 11:04 of the third period, Larose scored what turned out to be the deciding goal at 18:31.

Red Wings 7, Maple Leafs 3

Mickey Redmond became the third NHL player this season to score 40 goals as he notched a pair to lead Detroit over Toronto. Redmond scored one in each of the first two periods to power Detroit to a 5-3 lead. The Detroit sharpshooter joined Boston's Phil Esposito and Ken Hodge in the select 40 goal club. He has scored seven goals in his last three games.

Aeros 3, Blazers 2

Murray Hall, assisted by Mark Howe, slapped in the winnng goal at 12:12 in the final period to give Houston its victory over Vancouver. The win gave Houston a 14-point lead in the WHA West.

Nordiques 7, Jets 1

Michel Parizeau, Rejean Houle, Rejean Leclerc and Serge Bernier gave Quebec a 4-0 lead in the first three minutes of the opening period to spark the Nordiques past Winnipeg. In the opening minutes of the second period, the Nordiques increased their lead to six with Leclerc scoring his second of the night and 12th of the season tnd defenseman Francois Lacombe scoring unassisted.

Cougars 4, Sharks 2

Duke Harris scored two goals and player-coach Pat Stapleton had a goal and an assist to lead Chicago over Los Angeles. Harris put Chicago into a 2-1 lead at the end of the third period when he took a feed from Stapleton and scored from the edge of the right circle at 15:08. He added Chicago's final goal at 15:46 of the last period.

Tenth Straight For St. Mary's

KINGSTON

St. Mary's (A Division) Small Fry won their 10th straight Ulster County CYO victory with a 32-18 romp over St. Mary of the Snow of Saugerties.

Don Bigando led the unbeaten county champions with 14 points and Russ Timbrouck added eight. Top scorers for Saugerties were Jim Spiers with six points and R. Freer with four.

Tips for the Veterans

KINGSTON — Seriously disabled New York State veterans who are holders of fee-exempt New York State Thruway Permits are reminded that the annual permits expired Jan. 10. In Order to continue free use of the Thruway a properly completed 1974 permit registration application, as well as evidence that the applicant is qualified for and has received a fee-exempt motor vehicle registration (license plate) from the New York State Department of Motor Vehicles as a disabled veteran must be filed with the Thruway authority.

The State of New York grants a fee-exempt Motor Vehicle Registration to those seriously disabled veterans who received a grant toward the purchase of an automobile or other conveyance from the VA.

Veterans with service in World War II, Korean Conflict, and Vietnam Era, who suffered the loss of one or both hands or feet, or permanent impairment of vision of both eyes to a prescribed degree while in service and discharged under honorable conditions may qualify for the VA payment. The amount of payment is $2,800 toward the purchase price of the auto excluding adaptive equipment. Additional amounts are payable for the sepecial equipment required to assist the disabled veteran in operating the vehicle. Payments for maintaing and replacing this equipment are also provided.

Counseling on all veterans benefits is available from Don Moore, state veterans counselor at the local counseling center of the New York State Dicision of Veterans' Affairs located at its new location, 300 Flatbush Avenue, Telephone 331-9300 Ext. 287.

Guard Awards

KINGSTON — Four local National Guardsmen have been awarded a Boys Scouts of America certificate in "recognition of service to scouting."

The four, members of Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 156th Field Artillery, New York Army National Guard, Kingston, recently presented a demonstration of karate and the use of Morse Code before American Legion sponsored Troop 17, Tillson.

Named to receive the certificate were SP4 William Lahl and SP4 Martin Stoutenburg, both of Kingston, SP4 Daniel Rafkind of Stone Ridge and SP4 Carl Schlomberg of Highland.

Coordinating the demonstration was Sgt. John Schatzel of Tillson, who also serves as Assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 17.

ANC Expands

KINGSTON — The U.S. Army Nurse Corps has recently announced intentions to expand.

According to Sergeant John Fitzpatrick the Army Nurse Corps representative for this area, the Nurse corps is seeking another 300 young men and women by the end of the year.

The Nurse Corps, which celebrates its 73rd anniversary in February, presently has nearly 4,000 members almost 1,000 of whom are men. To join the Army Nurse Corps, members have traditionally traveled one of several routes. Some apply after graduating from an approval Baccalaureate program. Others have participated in the Army's Student Nurse program, which subsidizes up to 24 months of undergraduate work while providing a monthly salary in excess of $500. Another avenue is the Registered Nurse Student program which awards a commission to young men and women already have an RN and who want to work toward their bachelor and master's degrees. This program offers up to 24 months of subsidy.

Army nurses work in hospitals throughout the U. S. and in many overseas areas. Opportunities also exist for nurse clinician training in specialities such as pediatrics, obstetrics, medical-surgical, Army health and others.

Sergeant Fitzpatrick may be contacted at the local recruiting station, Broadway at Maiden Lane.

Student Dies From Burns

NEW PALTZ — Thomas J. Baumgarth, 24, a New Paltz college student who was critically burned Feb. 8 when a fire broke out in his off-campus room, died early today at Vassar Brothers Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

Baumgarth, who suffered first and second degree burns over 80 per cent of his body, had apparently fallen asleep on his bed in a room he rented at 19 South Oakwood Terrace, authorities said following the blaze.

Baumgarth's landlady, Mrs. Maryann Zunno, was awakened by the smell of smoke at about 5 a.m. on the morning of the fire. Police said she kicked in his door and pulled him from his smoldering bed.

Baumgarth had remained in critical condition at the hospital since the blaze.

'Freak Accident' Claims Printer

NEW WINDSOR, N.Y. (AP) — Thomas F. Corbett, 45, of Newburgh, was killed when his stalled car pinned him against a wall here Tuesday evening in what police described as "a freak accident."

Corbett, a printer at the Newburgh Evening News, was attempting to jump his car when it jerked backwards up a slight hill and rolled back down pinning him against the wall.

Corbett's 14-year-old son was in the car when the mishap occurred but New Windsor Police said it was not known why the car rolled backwards up the incline.

"It's hard to say if its anyone's fault," New Windsor Police Sgt. George Green said.

The mishap occured on N.Y. 32 in front of the Millbrook Bakery plant, officials said.

American Balloon Sighted, Spanish Agency Reports

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands (AP) — The balloon of American adventurer Thomas Gatch Jr. was sighted today over the Canary Islands, the Spanish news agency Europa Press reported.

The agency said the pressurized gondola, in which Gatch was trying to make the first balloon crossing of the Atlantic, was spotted over the Valley of the Orotava in the south of Santa Cruz de Tenerife.

It said the gondola, which has been reported missing for five days, was moving without difficulty south of the Orotava village.

The agency did not say who sighted the ballon, nor did it give any indication of Gatch's condition. The 48-year-old bachelor from Alexandria, Va., left Harrisburg, Pa., 10 days ago in his bid to become the first man to balloon across the Atlantic.

Coastal Spanish radio stations and air traffic authorities in Santa Cruz de Tenerife reported they knew nothing of Gatch's whereabouts. Police in Orotava and the town of Canada said they had seen no trace of the balloon.

A spokesman for the Gatch family in the United States said she had no immediate confirmation of the reported sighting.

The Spanish Canary Islands lie about 150 miles off the Spanish Sahara on the northwestern edge of Africa.

WORLD WAR II HORSE DIES — Jarman, the last known living horse used by the U. S. military during World War II, died in California at the age of 40. Used by the Coast Guard Beach Patrol during the war, Jarman had his last rider, PA2 Paul Bobley, three weeks ago during ceremonies marking the presentation of a horse blanket from members of the 12th Coast Guard District. Fittingly, Jarman, who was 120-years-old in human terms, died wearing his bright new blanket. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Course Ends On Saturday

STONE RIDGE

A course on the functions of government, legislative powers and duties which held its first meeting Saturday will have its second and final session Saturday morning, March 2, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The course has been made available to newly elected legislators and other office-holders through the Office of Continuing Education at Ulster County Community College. Classes are being held at the Burroughs Building at UCCC.

Dr. Donald C. Katt of UCCC is the instructor for the course. County Legislators Richard D. Nace (R-Dist. 2), and Eugene K. Noe (R-Dist. 8), are serving as group leaders in the program.

Those attending the course are exposed to graphic illustration, small group discussions, case studies, and role playing situations.

The course is jointly sponsored by the Ulster County Legislature and UCCC.

Insurance Session

The monthly meeting of the Kingston Area Independent Insurance Agents Association will be held Friday at 12:30 p. m. at the Holiday Inn in Kingston. The speaker will be Jerry Ramella, bond supervisor for I.N.A.

COUNTY OF ULSTER

THE WICKES CORPORATION, Plaintiff, — against —
FRANK A. TAMPONE, ELAINE M. TAMPONE, ROBERT BADIAN and JAMES A. SPELBOR, Defendants

SHERIFF'S SALE
INDEX NO. 74-106

By virtue of an execution issued out of the Supreme Court, Kingston, New York, County of Ulster, I, the undersigned Sheriff of Ulster County, have seized all the right, title and interest which the defendant, Robert Badian had on the 18th day of January, 1974 or subsequent thereto, of, in and to the following described premises, which I shall offer for sale at public auction as the law directs, at the Ulster County Court House in the City of Kingston, County of Ulster, New York on the 12th day of April, 1974, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, to wit:

ALL THAT PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND situate, lying and being in the Town of Hurley, County of Ulster and State of New York, bounded and described as follows:

BEGINNING at a point on the easterly side of State Route #375 leading from West Hurley to Woodstock and running thence on said easterly side of State Route #375 the following courses and distances: North 25° 35 minutes West, 39.91 feet, North 12° 42 minutes West, 85.41 feet; North 4° 35 minutes West 94.74 feet to a point; thence leaving said highway on a course South 79° 51 minutes East 221.52 feet to a point; thence South 30° 39 minutes West, 100 feet to a point; thence South 26° 6 minutes East, 25.91 feet to a point; thence South 63° 54 minutes West 150 feet to the point and place of beginning, containing 0.67 acres.

The foregoing being known as Plot No. 20 as shown on a map entitled "Map of survey of lands of Ben Sachs, Tanglewood Hotel Property" filed in the Ulster County Clerk's Office and more particularly described in a deed from Robert Badian to David Badian June 9, 1964 and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's Office November 9, 1954 in Deed Book 1159 at Page 791, together with and subject to the easements and other provisions of said deed.

BEING the same premises described in that certain deed David Badian to Robert Badian dated February 26, 1973 and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's Office on February 27, 1973 in Liber 1294 of Deeds at Page 858.

ALL THAT CERTAIN LOT, PIECE OR PARCEL OF LAND situate, lying and being in the Town of Saugerties, Ulster County, New York, more particularly identified as Lot No. 2 on "Map of Lands of The Three B's, Inc., Town of Saugerties, Ulster County, New York, dated December 31, 1968, and Revised June 2, 1969 and September 3, 1969" made by Eustance and Horowitz, Engineers, Circleville, New York, and filed in the Ulster County Clerk's Office January 22, 1970 as Map #2542.

BEING a portion of the premises conveyed by George Snyder and Grace L. Snyder to The Three B's Inc. by deed dated July 1, 1969 and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's Office July 1, 1969 in Liber 1229 of Deeds at Page 555.

SUBJECT to the following restrictions and restrictive covenants:

1. The minimum area of any dwelling erected will be 1,000 square feet for all types of dwellings except one with two complete stories and basement. Such dwelling will have a minimum living area, exclusive of the basement area, of 1,800 square feet.

2. No building erected on said premises shall have a tar paper, strip paper, asphalt shingle or asbestos shingle exterior siding.

3. Arrangements for sewage disposal shall be made by the purchaser herein, and shall be installed in accordance with plans approved by the Ulster County Department of Health.

The above restrictions to run with the land until January 1, 1980.

The premises herein described are sold subject to any building and zoning ordinances, covenants, easements and restrictions of record, if any, and also to any state of facts an accurate survey or inspection of said premises may reveal, provided the same does not render the title unmarketable; also, subject to and excepting therefrom highway and public utility conveyances, restrictions, easements and grants of record, if any; and subject to and excepting the rights of the public in and to the public highway which abuts the above described premises.

Your Horoscope

Thursday, February 28

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon you are likely to have very poor judgment, so avoid giving advice and start nothing new, or some real difficulties could follow. However, afternoon and p.m. are good for recreation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't bring an adviser and a good friend together, or an unfortunate argument ensues. Plan time for getting work done and for social contacts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you disagree with a higher-up, keep mum, or you lost support you now enjoy. Listen and you may find you are wrong.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Instead of fretting over present position, look into some new outlet that is more right for you. Combine hunches with fine judgment.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Listen to what a clever friend recommends instead of relying on that adviser who is not in fine fettle now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Remain neutral during a possible altercation between a higher-up and an associate, or you lose the support of both. Postpone action.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study new outlets while keeping steadfast to the old so you can decide which to choose. A letter brings good news.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Responsibilities are more vital than you believe, so get them behind you quickly and forget fun. Show loyalty to mate for greater future happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Kin and associates are in a mood for dispute, so keep them apart now and do not start any controversial subjects. Don't confide in others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be objective in judgment which is better than using your personal view right now. Schedule time wisely for duties.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Forget finances and anxieties now and relax with good friends. Evening is then fine for working on important matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do not disagree with those at home, or you get into unfortunate arguments best avoided. Early p.m. favors recreation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You like to live in a quiet and sensible way, so do not get into situations that could bring real trouble to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be very attractive, but will want just about everything he or she sees, so teach early to discriminate, know what can be afforded, or there could be much trouble instead of a steady course of success and happiness otherwise indicated. Bigwigs will assist your youngster easily, provided there is support of them and not roundabout criticism. A fine artist.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

HELPING: (Q) My mom has a problem with dad. He doesn't do anything. My mom always ends up doing it. What can she do? And what can I do to help?—Daughter, Age 13, in Texas.

(A) You can offer to do whatever chore you are capable of doing to ease your mother's load. You can also mention to her that for the book my husband and I wrote, "The Emerging Couple," I talked with many men and learned that most of them were willing to help with household jobs. Your father might be willing to help if your mother talked seriously with him about her need for help.

FINDING OUT: (Q.) I would like to know how you can tell if a girl likes you for a boy friend or not.—Curious in Alabama.

(A.) The best way to start finding out is to ask the girl for a date. If she says yes it may not mean she wants you for a boy friend. But at least it tells you that she is willing to try being more than just a friend to you. If you get along well on the date, others can follow, and your friendship can grow.

(Jean Adams reads every letter but regrets that she cannot send personal answers. Address your letter to Jean Adams, care of The Daily Freeman, P.O. Box 2402, Houston Texas 77001).

Barbs

By PHIL PASTORET

It's easier to say, "Don't let anyone bug you," than to tell if they have.

• • •

It's practically spring — and time to begin watering the mustard at the ballpark.

• • •

And then there's the bibulous skipper who had a yacht on the rocks.

Think how much more fuel the airlines would use if you didn't walk all those miles to the boarding gates.

• • •

People who sing at their work would get farther by doing it.

Add to your dictionary of collective nouns: a closing of gas stations.

Opening lead—♥7

The late Ely Culbertson was not only the first great contract authority, he was also one the keenest psychologists on problems of play.

His jump to seven spades was based on the fact that he was playing the Culbertson four notrump. In this convention a four notrump bid showed either three aces or two aces plus the king of a bid suit. Ely was looking at the ace and king of spades so he knew that his partner held the other three aces.

West, one of the top players of that day, led the seven of hearts as soon as the bidding was over.

Ely thought over the opening lead for 10 minutes and then called for dummy's queen of hearts. The finesse suceeded; Ely drew trumps; and claimed.

As he was being congratulated, Ely explained that he decided West was the sort of player who would try to give declarer an immediate problem and that the bidding had marked North with all the side aces.

If Ely had refused that finesse he would not have made the slam. Since the hand occurred in a totalpoint team match, it looked like a tremendous swing but it wasn't. At the other table North decided to bid seven notrump and East selected the jack of hearts as his opening lead. Declarer had no problems at all.

Nixon Talks GOP Politics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon summoned top Republican leaders to a breakfast meeting today on GOP politics, his fight against impeachment and his legislative program.

Among those invited were Vice President Gerald R. Ford and Republican National committee Chairman George Bush.

Nixon may send to the House Judiciary Committee today his Watergate lawyers' brief arguing that the only ground for impeachment is a criminal offense. Nixon took that narrow view of impeachment at his news conference Monday.

White House counselor Bryce Harlow told a group of reporters Tuesday that the claim of some in Congress that a president can also be impeached for abuse of constitutional duties is an effort "to ensnare the President."

Harlow said it will be "utterly impossible" to attach to Nixon "any criminal conduct," and therefore impeachmnt efforts will fail.

"I'm sure the President is clear about that in his own mind," he added. "That accounts for his astonishing resilience."

The President said Monday he does not expect to be impeached. "I'm likewise as confident that this too shall pass," said Harlow.

Harlow, who is leaving government in a few weeks, said he senses Nixon's "situation is improving" in national popularity. The President has been a low 28 per cent in polls in recent weeks.

Harlow also said the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry and full House action may be over by the end of April. Harlow is in close touch with Republican members of Congress. But so is assistant to the President William Timmons, the President's chief congressional aide, who recently said the impeachment inquiry might be delayed beyond the November congressional elections.

Harlow indicated that he had heard the Watergate tapes and said that the President was "profoundly preoccupied" during the 1972 re-election campaign and did not spend much time on politics.

He said he believed there would be a "very, very substantial vote against impeachment" if it were taken at this time.

VIET VETS DECLARATION — In a White House ceremony this week, President Nixon signed a declaration setting aside March 29 as Vietnam Veteran's Day. The signing marked the culmination of almost a year's effort on the part of Alphonso Sellett of Walker Valley who urged recognition of the Vietnam veteran and the day that the last American fighting man was pulled out of Vietnam. Standing behind the President are (L) Reps. John P. Hammerschmidt (R-Ark); Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-N.Y.) and W. B. Dorn, (S. C.)

FBI Still Waiting and Hoping

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The FBI says it doesn't know where kidnaped heiress Patricia Hearst is being held, and the 100 agents on the case aren't trying to find her.

Charles W. Bates, the agent in charge of the investigation, told newsmen after a two-hour meeting with Miss Hearst's father, publisher Randolph A. Hearst, and his family Tuesday night that the FBI was still being very careful.

"We don't know specifically where Patty Hearst is," he said during an impromptu news conference on the driveway of the Hearst mansion in suburban Hillsborough.

"And we don't intend to take any action to try to find out, because this could provoke some action on the part of the people who are holding her."

Bates' statement came as the anguished family waited for word from the kidnapers and the organizers of a free food giveaway tried to get a second distribution organized.

But Gov. Ronald Reagan urged Californians not to take the free food demanded by the abductors, saying those who did were "aiding and abetting lawlessness."

Reagan also said in Sacramento that two members of the Symbionese Liberation Army held in San Quentin on charges of murdering Oakland's black school superintendent would not be released by him in exchange for Miss Hearst. In previous communiques, the terrorist group has linked the suspects' fate with that of the 20-year-old granddaughter of William Randolph Hearst.

Bates said he still felt Miss Hearst would be returned safely and that there was no indication the SLA had "broken off negotiations" as its leader threatened in the last tape recording received by the family.

The tape, made a week ago Tuesday, was the last assurance Patricia was alive.

The tiny sect's self-styled "Field Marshal Cinque" gave Hearst 24 hours after the tape arrived Thursday to personally come up with $4 million more in free food—a demand the publisher said was impossible to meet. The Hearst Corp. pledged the money, but only on the condition the kidnaped girl was first released unharmed.

"Cinque" said talks would be ended and Miss Hearst treated as "a prisoner of war" if the demand were not met.

Organizers of "People in Need" began the food giveaway with the first $2 million in ransom arranged by Hearst and were still hoping to make their second distribution in a dozen poor neighborhoods Thursday, but no firm plans were announced.

A. Ludlow Kramer, Washington secretary of state and administrator of the program, said the demands by the kidnapers and community groups for higher quality food were delaying the giveaway. He said it also meant the project could run out of money in six to 12 weeks. The program had originally been announced as capable of providing food to 100,000 persons for a year.

Bates said he felt the food program could appease the SLA and that it was "logical" to assume the Hearsts would hear from the terrorists again despite the longest silence since their original demands.

Nader Attacks Major Oil Companies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ralph Nader said Tuesday the major oil companies were attempting to kill smaller competition at both wholesale and retail levels at the expense of the American consumer.

A group of FTC lawyers have recommended breaking up parts of eight big firms. Nader said the FTC aim was to increase competition and said that without it, consumer prices of gasoline and other fuels will soar.

Nader, the consumer advocate, contended that the big oil concerns are not importing all the oil they can because they can get higher prices in Europe, Japan and elsewhere in the world.

Nader said on the NBC-TV Today Show that there was "a contrived relationship between supply and demand to keep the domestic price of oil and gas high."

"And the tragedy of it all is, it is now moving into, in effect, a rapacious attempt to drive out the small business competitor at the retail and wholesale level so that the greater share of the oil companies' profits—the big oil companies—can come from the retail base.

"And that's why the objective is to double the price of oil in this country. They're attaining that objective, along with massive profits."

Nader said the FTC objective is "to break up the oil majors, separate the refining from the production and get this into a competitive sphere."

FTC lawyers told the commission's law judge, Donald R. Moore, that monopoly conditions existed in the U.S. oil industry, and that competition had been reduced. They asked that the big firms be ordered to divest themselves of 40 to 60 per cent of their refinery capacity on the East Coast and the Gulf Coast.

Nader said: "Without competition, there won't be adequate supply and without adequate supply, there's not going to be a fair price to the consumer who is forgotten about at the present time by Mr. Simon (energy chief William E. Simon)."

Nader charged, as he has often in the past, that "there's nobody there" in the Federal Energy Office looking out for average consumer. "They're all former oil men or business men with oil company connections, from Mr. Simon on down."

Justice Powell Key in Busing Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When the Supreme Court decides whether busing pupils across county lines to white suburban schools is a legal way to remedy segregation, Justice Lewis F. Powell may cast the deciding vote.

The court, confronting the touchy issue for a second time, today called up for argument a case from Detroit, where 65 per cent of the student population is black.

Powell's key role arises because he disqualified himself in a similar case from his home city of Richmond, Va., last term. As a result, the court split 4 to 4 and the Richmond busing plan was not carried out.

Because a tie vote does not set legal precedent, the whole matter is before the court again, this time with Powell voting. Powell had disqualified himself because he once served on the Richmond school board.

Suburban authorities have appealed a ruling by the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals requiring cross-district pupil assignments between Detroit schools and those in 53 surrounding districts, including affluent Grosse Point and Birmingham. About 800,000 pupils are involved.

The original desegregation decision from U.S. District Judge Stephen J. Roth of Detroit, ordered the school board to draw up an integration plan based on 15 school clusters, each containing a part of the Detroit system.

No specific plan is before the Supreme Court now, only the general approach.

U.S. Solicitor General Robert H. Bork, representing the federal government, has urged caution. He did not rule out a metropolis-wide remedy but said it would be justified only for the particular districts affected by a constitutional violation.

State Thruway Toll Change Set Sunday

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—A new system of collecting tolls on the New York State Thruway between Spring Valley and Harriman will take effect Sunday ,the Thruway Authority announced Monday.

Motorists heading south will turn in their toll ticket at the Harriman interchange. Northbound travelers will pick up their tickets at that point.

The Spring Valley toll barrier will be converted to a cash system only with a flat rate of 25 cents for passenger cars in each direction.

There will be no toll booths at the Suffern interchange, nor at a new interchange at Airmont Road, three miles north of Spring Valley.

Motorists using the Thruway south of Harriman will pay 30 cents at entry or exit and automatic lines will be installed.

Messmer Government Resigns

PARIS (UPI) — The government of Premier Pierre Messmer resigned today.

Education Minister Joseph Fontanet announced that Messmer handed in the resignation to President Georges Pompidou at the weekly cabinet session.

The 22-man cabinet has been in power since April 5, 1973, when it was formed after the general election.

Although Messmer has come under fire from his political opponents recently for lacking style and drive in government, the resignation was a surprise.

Information Minister Jean-Philippe Lecat said:

"President Pompidou has accepted the resignation of the government."

Political sources said Pompidou will now name a new appointee to the premier's post. His task will be to form a new council of ministers, or cabinet.

"The new prime minister will be selected rapidly, maybe even today," Lecat said.

Le Point magazine recently published a poll that found only 22 per cent of Frenchmen satisfied with the performance of Messmer, a 57-year-old former legionnaire, as premier.

"Pierre Messmer doesn't make the grade," it said in an interview. "Messmer must go."

L'Express said Foreign Minister Michel Jobert and Agriculture Minister Jacques Chirac had the best chances of being named to succeed Messmer.
